Tricia says Nixon won't resign

WASHINGTON — Tricia Nixon Cox confirmed Wednesday that her family had discussed the possibility of a presidential resignation over Watergate, but she quoted her father as saying: "I wouldn't do that because I haven't done anything wrong." Speaking out publicly for the first time on the political scandal that engulfed the White House, Mrs. Cox said the President has observed that "he was elected for four years and has a responsibility" to carry out his term. Speaking of reports that her father had considered resigning, Tricia said, "That has been floating around in family discussions, but my father said, 'I wouldn't do that because I haven't done anything wrong.'"

Safety belts cut insurance costs

DETROIT — Owners of 1974-model cars will receive a 20 per cent discount on the cost of personal injury protection from at least one insurance group because their automobiles will be equipped with the new seat belt-ignition interlock system. The savings could range as high as $20 a year in states which have no-fault insurance laws, M. Stanley Hughey, executive vice president of Kemper Insurance Group, said Wednesday. Kemper is the nation's seventh largest auto insurer with more than 1 million policyholders. The new safety belt system, required on all 1974 cars, will prevent the driver from starting the car until front-seat occupants are buckled up. Several studies have indicated that full use of lap and shoulder belts could reduce auto deaths by as much as 60 per cent.

IBM appeals contempt order

NEW YORK — International Business Machines Corp. succeeded Wednesday in getting the emergency judge of the second Circuit Court of Appeals to agree to hear a motion to stay an order of Chief U. S. District Judge David Edelstein in New York fining IBM $150,000 a day for contempt of court. The hearing will be held at 11 a.m. today before Judge William Timbers at Bridgeport, Conn. Timbers will determine whether Edelstein's ruling is appealable. (Earlier story, page 6.)

Prices to jump when freeze ends

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The President's Council of Economic Advisers predicted Wednesday there will be a "strong tendency to higher prices" once the current price freeze is lifted Aug. 12, and offered little hope of preventing it.

At the same time, Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said after a meeting with meat industry representatives he would personally favor lifting the price ceilings on beef before their scheduled expiration on Sept. 12.

"Beef supplies are drying up," Butz said. "The pressures are getting great and the dislocations are severe."

Herrell deGraff, president of the American Meat Institute, told reporters after conferring with Butz that if the ceilings are maintained, "beef is going to disappear from the retail counters in this country by Aug. 20 and not reappear again until the middle of September." Once the ceilings are lifted, deGraff said, beef prices will rise by as much as 20 per cent before new supplies gradually force them back down.

The prediction of higher postfreeze prices throughout the economy was made by President Nixon's three-member council of staff economists in a mid-year report to the Joint Congressional Economic Committee.

The council said it had no idea how high prices would rise or for how long.

"We have tried to make it clear to the American people that it would be neither possible nor desirable to repress all of these prospective increases," it said.

Claims lack of legal clout

Justice drops bomb case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, pleading he lacked legal authority, refused Wednesday to order an immediate bombing halt in Cambodia sought by a freshman congresswoman and four Air Force officers.

The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) promptly took the case to vacationing Justice William O. Douglas in the hope of getting a favorable ruling. Meanwhile it succeeded in advancing an appeals court hearing on the case by five days — to Aug. 8.

U.S. bombing in Cambodia is to end anyway on Aug. 15 under a deadline imposed by Congress and accepted by President Nixon in late June.

Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., and the Air Force officers won a decision by U.S. District Judge Orrin G. Judd in Brooklyn last week that the bombing was unconstitutional.

Mitchell may have lied

ITT affair points to Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Documents produced Wednesday at the Senate Watergate hearings suggested President Nixon had a direct role in the government's decision to drop a multimillion dollar antitrust suit against International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. (ITT).

The documents also indicated that John N. Mitchell did not tell the truth when he "denied under oath" that he had no knowledge of an ITT offer to provide $400,000 towards costs of the 1972 Republican National Convention if it were held in San Diego.

The references to Nixon and to Mitchell, the former attorney general, were contained in material of unknown origin that former White House special counsel Charles W. Colson attached to a memo he wrote March 30, 1972.

The administration has maintained throughout the ITT controversy that the Justice Department's agreement to settle the antitrust case out of court had nothing to do with ITT's offer of financial aid for the 1972 GOP convention, which was shifted from San Diego to Miami Beach.

The administration also has contended the decision to drop the ITT suit was made entirely by the Justice Department's Antitrust Division without outside interference.

The material that Colson attached to his memo said Nixon and Mitchell had had discussions about the "agreed upon ends" in resolving the ITT case and that another memo to Nixon not only "would contradict Mitchell's testimony" but also would "directly involve the President."

As to Mitchell's actions, the documents said details of the $400,000 ITT offer had been set forth in a June 30, 1971 memo to H.R. Haldeman, the White House chief of staff, and that copies were sent to Mitchell and two White House aides — Jeb Stuart Magruder and William Timmons.

"This memo put the AG (attorney general) on constructive notice at least of the ITT commitment at that time and before the settlement, facts which he has denied under oath," the documents said.

The explosive documents came as a surprise to Haldeman as he was concluding his third and final day of testimony before the Senate Watergate Committee. But Nixon's crew-cut former chief lieutenant showed no signs that he was startled or flustered by the revelations.

When confronted with the material, Haldeman said he did not recall seeing the Colson memo.

In producing it, Chief Committee Counsel Samuel Dash said the memo showed Mitchell "may have committed perjury" in his denial at confirmation hearing for Richard G. Kleindienst as his successor.

Dash also noted Haldeman has testified that five days after receiving the Colson memo he discussed "the ITT Kleindienst matter" with Nixon.

This exchange occurred:

Dash: "And if you had in fact received this memorandum, which had given you information that the attorney general may have committed perjury in the Kleindienst confirmation hearings, would it not have been a matter that you would have taken up with the President?"

Haldeman: "I would have either taken it up with the President or ascertained — or gotten someone who had direct knowledge of the situation to take it up with the President, yes."

Calif. Bar probes President's conduct

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The California Bar Association disclosed Wednesday it is investigating the conduct of President Nixon and other attorneys involved in the Watergate affair to determine whether disciplinary action should be taken.

The investigation was not "intensive," but had the equivalent of one person working on it fulltime, state bar President Leonard S. Janofsky told a news conference.

In addition to Nixon, Janofsky said, other members involved in Watergate under inquiry include John D. Ehrlichman, Herbert W. Kalmbach, Robert C. Mardian, Donald H. Segretti and Gordon C. Strachan.

Janofsky said the state also had been in contact with Los Angeles District Attorney Joseph P. Busch Jr., special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and the Florida attorney general in its investigation.

"Some months ago our staff commenced an inquiry into the conduct" of the attorneys, Janofsky said.

He said the State Bar staff will continue to "monitor the evidence being developed by the Ervin Committee" and has communicated with various authorities involved in the Watergate probe.

The State Bar has no legal authority to prosecute any criminal actions, he noted. "It does, however, have disciplinary functions to perform with respect to members who may have engaged in illegal or improper conduct."

Janofsky said the bar was waiving its practice of not disclosing whether an attorney is under investigation "because of the general knowledge about the events of Watergate and the public assertion of misconduct by some lawyers."

He said it is "absolutely untrue that formal disciplinary proceedings have commenced with respect to any member of the State Bar arising out of Watergate."

The inquiry undertaken, which could lead to such disciplinary proceedings will proceed "in accordance with usual practice," he said.

"The State Bar," he said, "intends to discharge its responsibilities fully and fairly, and as promptly as circumstances will permit."

By the inquiry under way, and its disclosure, the bar "has not prejudged any individual...any judgment as to guilt or innocence can only be made at the conclusion of appropriate proceedings conducted in accordance with California law."

Haldeman confronted with memos of campaign tactics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — H. R. Haldeman acknowledged under stern questioning Wednesday he wrote "good" and "great" on a high priority White House memo saying violence and obscene demonstrations were expected against President Nixon and evangelist Billy Graham at a 1971 rally in Charlotte, N.C.

Ending three days of testimony before the Senate Watergate committee, the former White House chief of staff contended he used such words because the demonstrations would reveal the protesters "true intent and method of operation."

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., produced the memo and angrily charged that Haldeman and the Nixon re-election camp often used demonstrations "to serve your interests."

In an emotional statement before the 33rd day of nationally televised hearings, the usually somber Haldeman expressed pride in his White House service, but "my deep regret and sorrow that in a few instances there was a failure..."

Weicker also questioned Haldeman about other White House memos that the committee had obtained. He charged that a 1973 Haldeman memo discussing plans to float a newspaper story tying the 1972 George S. McGovern presidential campaign to Communist funds was "a disgrace." He added that there since has been no change in tactics at the White House.

Weicker also produced a memo by Lawrence Higby, a Haldeman aide, asking for itemization of anti-Nixon disruptions in 1972, including "indications of violence and Communist activity and all that sort of thing."

"It's funny how the word 'Communist' keeps popping up here," Weicker said. He recalled the testimony of Bernard L. Barker, a Cuban-American convicted as the leader of the team that broke into the Democratic national offices in the Watergate on June 17, 1972, that he was motivated by the belief that Cuban Communists were backing the Democrats.

"You know, Mr. Barker is in jail today because somebody sold him that story," Weicker said. "That's the reason he went into the Watergate."

Sen. Joseph M. Montoya, D-N.M., said that after seeing the "pattern" in the Haldeman memos that he feared "for the authenticity" of the tapes of Nixon's conversations if the committee gains access to them. Haldeman said he did not tamper with them while he had them in his possession.

Under questioning by the committee's chief counsel, Sam Dash, Haldeman testified he received three tapes other than those of the March 21 and Sept. 15 meetings between Nixon and ousted White House Counsel John W. Dean III.

Haldeman said the tapes came from a period between last February and April, but that he did not listen to them.

Haldeman testified that from his monitoring of the Sept. 15 tape, "I don't recall" whether there was a reference to any efforts to stop a House investigation of Watergate.

Some of Weicker's sharpest questioning of Haldeman came after the senator produced the memo concerning the rally in Charlotte on Oct. 15, 1971, which spoke of anticipated demonstrations against Graham and the President.

U.S. will keep troops in Asia

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon assured Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka Tuesday the United States will keep adequate military forces in Asia, and the two leaders agreed to help rehabilitate war-torn Indochina.

In a joint communique issued at the end of their two days of official talks in Nixon's White House Oval Office, the President accepted Tanaka's invitation to visit Japan "at a mutually convenient time before the end of 1974."

The President reconfirmed his standing invitation for Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako to visit the United States "in the near future at a mutually convenient time."

Nixon and Tanaka agreed, the communique said, that "the existing framework of international relations had been the basis for the recent trend toward the relaxation of tensions in Asia."

"The President confirmed the intention of the United States to maintain an adequate level of deterrent forces in the region," the statement said.

Both Nixon and Tanaka "expressed their strong hope for a stable and lasting peace in Indochina through scrupulous implementation of the Paris agreements on a Vietnam cease-fire" and "reaffirmed their resolve to assist the rehabilitation of Indochina."

E. Germany's Ulbricht, last of the Stalinists, dies

BERLIN (UPI) — Walter Ulbricht, the goateed Stalinist iron man who threw a deadly barbed-wire wall around East Germany and built a Communist powerhouse inside, died Wednesday of heart failure. He was 80.

The East German government and party leadership announced "with deep sorrow" that Ulbricht—still chief of state although eased out of party power in 1971—had died at 12:55 p.m. A medical bulletin attributed death to "heart failure."

Funeral arrangements were not immediately announced for the man who built the anti-refugee Berlin wall in 1961 and pushed the United States and the Soviet Union to the brink of war. At the height of that crisis, American and Soviet tanks faced each other across the line dividing East and West Berlin.

Flags were lowered to half-staff in Eastern Europe where his death was mourned at a great loss for the working class. There was no immediate reaction from West German Chancellor Willy Brandt's coalition government but a spokesman said President Gustav Heinemann would send a message of condolences.

Ulbricht, whose grinding toughness undoubtedly made him the most hated man in postwar Germany, had been incapacitated by a stroke since July 19.

afternoon was stayed at the government's request pending an appeals court hearing scheduled for Aug. 13 —two days before the congressional deadline for a bombing halt.

Stymied by this delay, the ACLU took the case to Marshall, who administers the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court where the suit originated. After two days of deliberations, Marshall handed down a 12-page opinion saying he would "exceed my legal authority were I, acting alone, to grant this application."

With the Supreme Court in recess, a motion denied by one justice can be taken to another. It was not known how long it would take the ACLU to reach Douglas at his isolated vacation retreat at Goose Prairie, Wash. At the same time, the ACLU asked the 2nd Circuit Court to hold its hearing on the government's appeal next Friday, Aug. 3. The appeals court agreed instead to advance the hearing to Aug. 8.

Jets dive over capital

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — American F4 Phantom jets, diving directly over the capital, attacked rebel positions within two miles of the center of Phnom Penh Wednesday in full view of residents who stopped their cars to watch the air raid. It was the most intense U.S. air activity visible in Phnom Penh since April when American warplanes bombed rebel positions on the east bank of the Mekong river directly across the river from the city. Some of the fighter-bombers made their runs directly over the U.S. Embassy, where employees climbed to the roof to watch them. Late in the afternoon, three B52 Stratofortresses flying low enough to be in clear view also passed over the city to drop their huge bomb loads in the same area.

The air strikes closest to Phnom Penh were at the junction of the Bassac and Mekong Rivers, 1.8 miles from the city's center. The Phantoms also struck directly across the Bassac river from the suburb of Takhmau.

Elsewhere, military sources said that a village outside the town of Skoun, 41 miles northeast of Phnom Penh on Highway 6, has fallen to rebel forces. The village of Sangker Pong was the second to fall within two days.

Two more embassies, the Indian and the Philippines, acted Wednesday to prepare diplomatic dependents and other nationals for immediate evacuation from the Cambodian capital.

In South Vietnam, the Saigon military command said government units were mauled in a pre-dawn Communist attack Wednesday near the provincial capital of Quang Tri, 320 miles northeast of Saigon.

Text of Haldeman's memo to John Dean

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Text of a memo, dated Feb. 10, 1973, from H. R. Haldeman to John Dean, released Wednesday at the Senate Watergate Hearings:

"We need to get our people to put out the story on the foreign or Communist money that was used in support of demonstrations against the President in 1972. We should tie all 1972 demonstrations to McGovern and thus to the Democrats as part of the peace movement.

"The investigation should be brought to include the peace movement which leads directly to McGovern and Teddy Kennedy. This is a good counter-offensive to be developed. In this connection we need to itemize all the disruptions such as the Century Plaza, San Francisco, Statue of Liberty, and so on.

"You should definitely order (acting FBI director) L. Pa-

Answer to beef shortage

Thanksgiving in August?

By United Press International
Supermarkets in the nation's largest city were promoting Thanksgiving in August Wednesday as meat wholesalers locked their doors for a day. Retail shoppers across the country reported less beef in their supermarkets.

Grocers reported getting less beef from their wholesalers and the wholesalers said they were not buying beef because cattle raisers were charging so much they could not make a profit under the retail price freeze which is effective Sept. 12.

"Sure, beef is available," said Bob Schneider, a supplier of meats for home freezers in the Detroit area. "But we can't afford to buy it because we're not allowed to raise our retail prices. Unless there's some relief, I'll have to close down temporarily in the next two weeks."

The major wholesale suppliers of beef in New York City did just that Wednesday, closing for the day because as one said, "The remaining supplies of beef do not warrant a five-day operation."

Leaders of the American Meat Institute, shortly before a meeting with Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz in Washington, issued a statement asking that the beef ceiling be lifted before the Sept. 12 deadline.

Beef was the only food item that remained frozen under Phase IV. In the two weeks since Phase IV was announced, prices of other goods have gone up sharply, especially poultry, eggs and other meats.

McDonalds, the firm that gained fame by selling millions of hamburgers, was in danger of running out of its specialty in western New York State.

Meany predicts recession soon

CHICAGO (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany predicted Wednesday the nation will have a recession before the end of the year and that housing construction will come to a stop because of President Nixon's handling of the economy.

"We're facing economic disaster," Meany told a news conference after the opening session of the AFL-CIO Executive Council's summer meeting in suburban Oak Brook. "The recession is built into the present situation."

The council called for an end of all economic controls as soon as possible, charging that all four phases of the White House program had been inequitable for workers and consumers and weighted in favor of big business and the wealthy.

"We're willing to bite the bullet and face the end of all controls," Meany said even though he predicted workers and consumers would have major temporary problems and disruptions in a return to a free market economy before things settled down.

Despite the economy, the Watergate scandal and related alleged wrongdoings in the administration and President Nixon's campaign, Meany said he had no regrets about not endorsing Democrat George S. McGovern in last year's presidential election.

The 78-year-old Meany said impeachment of President Nixon would be impractical because it would not succeed. He declined to say whether Nixon should resign.

Fired LCB counsel cites corruption by politicians

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Control of liquor sales in Pennsylvania is caught in a web of power and politics, according to Alex Jaffurs, former Liquor Control Board (LCB) counsel.

Politicians besiege the board, looking for a cut in fines or favorable rulings for clients of constituents, Jaffurs said.

In nearly five hours of testimony before a House committee, Jaffurs outlined more than a dozen cases where he said legislators and political leaders tried to pressure him or the LCB.

Jaffurs, hired when the board was Republican controlled, was fired earlier this month by the Shapp administration. He was the first witness in a House Liquor Control Committee investigation of the state's liquor system.

The alleged incidents Jaffurs revealed Wednesday in his 49-page statement involved some of the state's most powerful politicians including Philadelphia Democrat Party Chief Peter Camiel, House Minority Leader Herbert Fineman, D-Philadelphia, and Sen. Martin Murray, D-Luzerne, president pro tempore of the Senate.

Jaffurs said the LCB never publicized fines against Camiel or his brother Edwin, who own a beer distributorship in Philadelphia.

He said LCB member Daniel Pennick always asked that Camiel's name be deleted in weekly press releases on firms fined, until Jaffurs complained of the practice and it was stopped.

Jaffurs also said he was blocked by Attorney General Israel Packel from appealing a case involving alleged license violations Camiel fought in court.

Camiel wanted "specific charges" from the LCB on the alleged violations, a move for which Jaffurs was fired.

Other cases Jaffurs cited allegedly involved.

—State Sen. Frank Mazzei, D-Allegheny, who Jaffurs claimed wanted to stop the LCB from suspending the license of William Pflaumer & Sons, a Philadelphia beer distributor.

Jaffurs said he was told by LCB member Pennick that Mazzei was blocking Pennick's confirmation to the board and a bill that would hike the LCB salaries because of the "Pflaumer matter."

—Fineman once called Jaffurs to oppose the firing of Henry Sklar, a Hearing Examiner hired by the GOP. Jaffurs said he suspected case assignments were "juggled" so Sklar would handle the hearing.

—Fineman said he had an understanding with the personnel office regarding this position for Mr. Sklar," Jaffurs said. "He said that he would go to the governor, if necessary, and wanted to know if I realized that I may be embarrassing him with the administration."

Jaffurs said Shapp later dismissed Sklar.

—Rep. Joseph Sullivan, D-Philadelphia, ranking minority member of the House Liquor Control Committee, who Jaffurs said "wanted some help" in a case against a bar in his district.

Jaffurs testified Sullivan told him "the board needed all the friends it could get because resentment was building up against the board."

According to Jaffurs, many legislators came to him to delay hearings on alleged violations or speed up the processing of license applications.

Senator called 'little Jap'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — H. R. Haldeman's lawyer referred to Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, as "that little Jap" Wednesday and said later he saw nothing wrong with the comment, adding: "I wouldn't mind being called a little American."

John J. Wilson, 72, made the first remark after the morning session of the Senate Watergate hearings when a reporter asked if he believed Haldeman had been questioned fairly by Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn.

Non-prescription sales of vitamins A,D, restricted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) Wednesday banned the non-prescription sale of vitamins A and D in high concentration doses, saying the nutrients are "clearly dangerous" when taken in large quantity.

The ban takes effect in 60 days, after which time a doctor's prescription will be needed to buy Vitamin A in single doses above 10,000 international units and Vitamin D in one-pill doses of more than 400 international units.

The limit for Vitamin D is the same as the recommended daily allowance for that nutrient while the non-prescription ceiling for Vitamin A is slightly higher than the recommended daily allowance.

Consumers will still be able to buy without prescription any quantity of either vitamin in doses below the ceilings and presumably could swallow several weaker pills to match the potency of the prescription-only ones, FDA officials said.

"Excessive doses of vitamins A and D are clearly dangerous without physician supervision and high potency doses will be limited to prescription use," FDA Commissioner Dr. Alexander M. Schmidt told a news conference.

The FDA said excessive amounts of Vitamin A taken over a long period may produce pressures inside the skull which mimic the symptoms of a brain tumor. Large doses of both vitamins, it added, have been shown to retard growth in children.

The agency also made final a series of other restrictions on vitamins which will go into effect at the end of next year. These include a ban on vitamins combined with other substances which have no "scientifically recognized nutritional value" and the classification as drugs of any food, vitamin or food supplement containing more than three times the recommended daily allowance of any one vitamin.

The health food industry has claimed that the combination ruling would force it to reformulate perhaps 90 per cent of all vitamin combination products — such as Vitamin C combined with bioflavins — because the non-vitamin ingredients have no proven value. Industry officials have said an unknown number would be pulled from production.

Senate approves CIA director

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Wednesday approved the nomination of William E. Colby as CIA director, brushing aside questions about the veteran undercover agent's suitability for the job.

Reflected in the 83 to 13 vote for confirmation were Colby's promise to keep the Central Intelligence Agency out of domestic operations and his expressed belief the CIA should answer more fully to Congress.

Opposition to Colby's nomination, led by Sens. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass, centered around his 2 1/2 years in charge of "Operation Phoenix" in South Vietnam.

Kennedy said 20,587 Viet Cong suspects were killed in the program, an effort to stamp out South Vietnamese citizenry support for the Viet Cong.

Part of the U.S. pacification program, which Colby directed from late 1968 to early 1971, Operation Phoenix has been criticized for its use of torture and assassination.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who also opposed Colby's nomination, introduced legislation that would limit the CIA director to an eight-year term and require the President to approve each clandestine CIA operation in writing.

"We do not have to break the law to have effective intelligence operations," said Cranston, who called Colby "a symbol of the illegal use of power."

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., acting chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Colby had testified that Phoenix was improperly run when he took it over, but that he initiated reforms to remove abuses.

"This was a man acting under orders," Symington said. "He accepted a tough job and did his best to carry it out."

Symington urged the Senate not to penalize Colby by rejecting his nomination on the basis that he had been involved in paramilitary operations rather than conventional warfare in Indochina.

Symington and Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said no previous nominee for the top U.S. intelligence post had ever been questioned so extensively by Congress.

Jet crash probe underway

BOSTON (UPI) — Federal transportation inspectors said Wednesday they had "a lot of pieces to look at" in trying to determine what caused a Delta DC9 jetliner to crash in heavy fog at Logan International Airport, killing all but one of 89 persons aboard.

The survivor of Tuesday's crash, Air Force Sgt. Leopold Chouinard, 20, Marshfield, Vt., remained in critical condition, but conscious and talking to relatives at Massachusetts General Hospital. His parents and his fiancée, Brenda Newton, 19, were at his side.

Doctors said they hoped to operate later Wednesday or today in an effort to save Chouinard's legs which were badly burned.

New criteria established for health care services

STROUDSBURG — Criteria to be used in the evaluation of all proposals for new or expanded health services submitted to the agency have been issued by the Eastern Pennsylvania Comprehensive Health Planning Board (CHPB).

CHPB is a non-profit, private agency covering a six county area of Berks, Carbon, Lehigh, Northampton, Monroe and Schuylkill.

Its mission is to identify short and long range health needs and priorities, and to act as a catalyst in the development of services to meet those needs.

The promulgation of criteria was described as being a necessary element of the board's developing review and comment procedures.

The criteria to be used in the evaluation of all proposals are required under the provisions of the 1972 amendment to the Social Security Act.

A spokesman for CHPB said, "Of necessity, the standards are detailed and require some time to digest. They are intended to provide prospective sponsors with guidelines as to the information we will need in our reviews."

The new Social Security amendment has given area wide comprehensive health planning agencies, such as CHPB, major new responsibilities to review projects before commitments are made to proceed with their development.

Requirements for the basic plan for proposals to CHPB are as follows:

—Relationship to community need, based on demographic analysis of target population.

—Project demand for services over a 10-year period.
—Specification of plans for evaluation of service's effectiveness.

—Demonstration that services, if specialized, do not duplicate those presently available, whether or not they are available outside the sponsor's immediate service area.

—Accessibility for target area population, in terms of distance, hours of operation, provision for services without charge.

—Adequacy of anticipated utilization (can utilization be expected to approach most economical levels of operation).

In the area of economics, the following points will be considered:

—Adequacy of capital expenditures program.

—Effect of expenditures program on cost structure.

—Consideration of alternative, less costly approaches to provision of services (outpatient or partial hospitalization, purchase of services from other provider).

—Consideration of alternative, less costly approaches to construction.

—Potential for sharing of service with other facilities.

To be considered under environmental impact are the following:

—Incompatible land use.

—Relationship of existing structures in immediate vicinity.

—Environmental impact on immediate neighborhood.

Community participation necessities are as follows:

—Community response to application.

Waste problem coming home?

If Monroe County's liquid waste haulers stick to their decision to "strike" next week, it is going to pose an interesting dilemma for county and state officials.

Up to now, county's waste disposal problem has been largely ignored by the majority of its residents. But they are going to have a hard time ignoring an overflowing septic tank when there's no one available to clean it out. And an aroused citizenry will descend on the county's commissioners in droves.

The state, of course, no doubt will get its share of abuse, as local representatives begin to hear from their outraged constituency. It is state standards, and local officials' failure to comply with them, that have caused the impasse.

The commissioners deserve any tirade they are subjected to. The problem of where to dispose of our waste has been with us for years, but nothing was done until it was forced upon them. A solid waste advisory committee was appointed and given free reign. Left to their own devices, they took two years to produce an all but useless report.

As a consequence, the county General Authority was appointed, but has hardly had time to come up with a workable solution. It has been looking for disposal sites, and yet commissioners backed off on the one acceptable site last year when they flinched at residents' objections to the use of Devil's Hole property as a disposal site.

That was a political decision, and that's the way politics works: you push a problem down one place and it pops up at another.

County commissioners now will have the problem of finding an acceptable (to the state) means of disposing waste, and in a hurry, too. Unfortunately, if there is a worse way to do something, we haven't yet found it. Hasty decisions are always regretted at leisure.

And this is just the beginning. We have until October to find some place to dump our solid wastes, because the county's largest landfill will close at that time. We hope one is found by then. Not everyone must have his septic tank emptied, but everyone must have his garbage hauled away.

And the spurts of anger we foresee coming from the liquid waste haulers' strike is as nothing compared to the flood that would be loosed by a shutdown of the garbage hauling industry.

Moving on pests

Monroe County commissioners have acted in the best interests of the county in hiring a qualified pest control specialist to deal with the gypsy moth and other insects that make life miserable for people.

They have acted quickly, too. The result is that the new position has some chance of success, with time ahead for planning next year's assault on the moth and mosquitoes.

As far as the moth is concerned, there really is little time to waste. We cannot suffer too many defoliations like this year's with permanent damage to our woody, attractive environment.

Mosquitoes aren't a drastic threat here — not yet, anyway. But they are a darned nuisance, and we hope that some coordinated program to stop that pest's proliferation can be devised.

One of the best ways to control mosquitoes, of course, is for the individual landowner to do some maintenance work. Clean out those drainage ditches, get rid of that junk, those old tires and tin cans, clear out any area of standing water that might give mosquitoes a place to reproduce.

Perhaps one of the functions of this new pest control office might be to educate the public about steps such as these they can take to help control pests of all sorts. It not only would make the specialist's job a lot easier, but rid the area of unwanted pests much more quickly.

The elephants had dominated the first half, but the bugs came on strong after the second half kick-off and won.

"It was the centipede," said the bug.

"But where was he during the first half?"

"He was lacing up his shoes."

Domino theory

By RUSSELL KIRK

Imagine all the automobiles owned by Americans concentrated in the state of Washington, and everybody driving about enthusiastically and without much concern for the rules of the road. That is what has begun to happen in Britain, where possession of a car has become the principal ambition of a large part of the population.

It is not yet quite so dismaying as all that, because the average British subject is not affluent enough to buy an automobile. But he thinks he soon will be; and public policy in England, Scotland, and Wales seems to be founded on that assumption.

The British countryside is uglified with increasing speed, as new highways devour prime agricultural land and penetrate mountains and moorland that until now were accessible only to walkers. Charming old towns are torn apart to widen roads or provide for parking. And death on the road becomes as commonplace as it long has been in the United States.

Yet by the time all this road building and radical change in transportation has reached its zenith, the automobile age may end abruptly and catastrophically. Mr. Douglas Woodruff, one of England's more perceptive serious journalists, remarks that the Automobile Age will be much briefer than was the Railway Age. For the price of petrol in Britain, already very high, may become prohibitive.

The "energy crisis" is as real in Britain as it is in the United States. Atomic fission, which was supposed to solve all such problems, has achieved negligible results in Britain. Even if the undersea oil fields off the Scottish coast can be developed during the next few years, meanwhile increasing demand for fuel, and decreasing supply of petroleum, will have swallowed up the prospective gains in that quarter.

Why did Britain have no great problems of transportation until very recent years? Because the British railway system, the first in the world, could transport goods and passengers speedily and efficiently almost anywhere in the British Isles. The locomotives burned coal, and coal was abundant. Public transportation was cheap, easy, and often pleasant.

But from the day when the British railways were nationalized, just after World War II, this network of public transportation decayed steadily. Steadily Attlee's Socialist government could have improved and coordinated rail and bus transportation, and could have discouraged transportation of heavy freight over the roads by lorry. But the Labor Party did nothing of the sort.

Permitted to decline

Instead, under both Labor and Conservative governments, British rail transportation was permitted to decline. Massive construction of bridges and roads amounted to a subsidizing of highway traffic. Over the past decade, many railway lines have been abandoned wholly, in a public policy curiously called "rationalization" of transport. And so, stupidly imitating American ways in a land only a fraction the size of the United States, Britain has fallen into a kind of highway madness.

Nearly a century ago, Thomas Hardy wrote in his novels of the empty and grass-grown highroads of England: in that time, the triumph of the rails had almost effaced travel by highway. Nowadays, the railway beds are derelict. But it will not take a hundred years for the Age of the Automobile to expire.

This infatuation with cars in Britain is part and parcel of a deceptive economic prosperity, made possible by easy credit; other phenomena of this hectic flush are wondrously heavy drinking in every pub, and immense expenditure upon gambling, especially bingo. Food and housing are lavishly subsidized out of public funds — which policy leaves people with cash to spend on drink, bingo, and the new car.

Within a very few years, the economic and social consequences of automobile madness will compel an abrupt change of public policy in Britain. But what then? Already the railway beds are wilderness.

Cancers yield to drugs

More and more statistics point to the fact that some cancers are yielding with greater frequency to the attack by new and often spectacular chemicals.

Patients with leukemia, cancer of the breast, cancer of the cervix, and Hodgkin's disease are being maintained in good health by single or combined chemicals.

Drugs like methotrexate and one known as 5-FU are but two of the many drugs that are used to destroy cancer cells in some parts of the body.

Impressive statistics that are forthcoming from hospital centers emphasize the need for early recognition and early intensive heroic treatment.

The combination of early detection and the aggressive use of these drugs is most encouraging.

Sickle cell anemia, an inherited condition, is receiving concentrated attention.

Before ten years ago, this disease was casually taken for granted, and even overlooked, in research projects.

Today, the sickling, or crescent-shaped, deformities of the red blood cells are considered in their proper perspective of inherited diseases.

At Emory University in Atlanta, Dr. A.J. Sophianopoulos has been using special drugs with anti-sickling properties to re-establish the shape and the functioning capacity of red blood cells.

While this work is going on, geneticists are hard at work trying to discover why sickle cell anemia is so prevalent in particular groups of people.

Eventually it is hoped that, by genetic counseling and even genetic manipulation, sickle cell anemia will be eliminated.

Until then, these drugs may be effective in reducing the devitalizing aspects of this disease.

Bleeding from the esophagus, the tube that brings food from the mouth to the stomach, is a vexing medical problem.

Enlarged veins, or varices, not unlike varicose veins, are known to be responsible for some types of esophageal bleeding.

At the University of Tokyo Hospital, a new and spectacular operation is being tried to control extensive bleeding from the esophagus.

Dr. Mitsuo Sugiura and Dr. Shunji Futagawa have developed and are using a surgical technique for some patients whose lives are threatened by these enlarged and bleeding veins.

Almost 100 patients have had this operation, with spectacular success.

Surgeons everywhere are watching with great enthusiasm these early reports before universally accepting and duplicating this two-stage operation.

Seaweed has turned out to be an excellent source of special drugs.

At the University of California, ten or more chemical compounds have been extracted from the seaweed found in coastal waters.

Fire victim gives thanks

Editor, The Record:

We would like to thank all our relatives, friends, and all the residents of Monroe County and surrounding areas for the help and generous donations given to us after the loss of our home in the fire, on July 2, at 186 Stokes Ave., East Stroudsburg.

We would also like to extend a "thank you" and a "job well done" to the Stroud Township Volunteer Fire Company, Police Department, and the East Stroudsburg Police Department, for their effort in trying to save our home and saving our neighbor's homes from damage.

We greatly appreciate the generosity extended to us from the Salvation Army, the Red Cross, Women's Guild of the Grace Lutheran Church of East Stroudsburg, Bucks Jones of the East Stroudsburg Redevelopment Project, the Hauserville Chapel, East Stroudsburg, employees of Pocono Manor Inn.

A very special thank you to Mr. and Mrs. Milton Miller and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Simon for their generous hospitality.

Also the McGonigal children and Interstate Engineering Corporation for their wonderful fire alarms which saved our lives and for whom I am now working.

Nixon tapes backfired

Editor, The Record:

In reference to the White House tapes, President Nixon is damned if he does and damned if he doesn't.

If he releases the tapes, he knows he will incriminate himself. If he doesn't, everyone will believe he is guilty.

And so, dear Richard, the tapes backfired. I would like to tell Nixon he was "elected" President, not king. And that he will obey the law the same as I or anyone else.

I wonder what the people who contributed to the Nixon campaign think about the way the money was used? In my estimation, it was thrown around as if it was Monopoly money.

How about the $400,000 that was paid to Gov. Wallace's opponent (one of the dirty tricks)?

And now I would like to tell you how to have your property landscaped: Just have it done and send the bill to the government. That's what Nixon, Julie and Agnew did!

Agnew bought a home for $180,000 and the government paid $125,000 to landscape it and put in new sidewalks. I wonder if this was done for his "security"?

The government paid to have a lawn seeded and the place landscaped on the grounds that Julie and David (Eisenhower) rented from Nixon's friend Bebe Rebozo. (I wonder how long Rebozo will be Nixon's friend when he is kicked out of the White House?)

Dylox dangerous chemical

Editor, The Record:

I am one of the people whose car was spotted by spraying with Dylox. Information received from the supervisor, chemical engineering, General Motors Corp., states that Dylox has a generic name, trichlorfon.

It is manufactured by Chemagro Corp. Furthermore, he informed me that trichlorfon may be harmful if swallowed, inhaled or absorbed through the skin. Over-exposure will result in cholinesterase depression.

I was also informed that my car should be completely refinished, since the Dylox has penetrated into the primer and may cause deterioration of the metal if not removed.

I am only writing this as information that the people who want more spraying may be aware of some of the dangers in this particular chemical.

Doesn't mind feet, but smoke!

Editor, The Record:

Many of our local stores have "No Bare Feet" signs posted on their doors. Why not "No Smoking" signs?

Nothing is more offensive than to stand in the checkout line behind someone puffing on a smelly old cigar or cigarette and have the smoke in one's face.

Worse yet, these people have the nerve to drop the butts on the floor and stomp them

I often wonder how these people would like someone to come into their home and stomp a cigarette out on their floor?

I don't mind the bare feet, but I sure don't like that smoke in my face. How about some "No Smoking" signs in the supermarket and other stores?

Calley tapes

WASHINGTON — In his taped interviews, Lt. William Calley described the My Lai massacre as "just like killing animals" with whom he could neither speak nor reason.

He discussed the tragedy freely with psychiatrists. "Do you just want to get into some blood and guts?" he asked them. "Or do you want to go through the chronological order on what happened?"

He told about gunning down helpless Vietnamese villagers who had been taken prisoner. Later, he killed someone crawling through a rice field; it turned out to be a child. He also confessed to shooting an old man.

When one of his soldiers hesitated to join in the slaughter, Calley kicked him and ordered him to start shooting. Yet in the middle of the massacre, Calley stopped another soldier from sexually molesting a Vietnamese girl.

'Following orders'

As Calley recounted the horror of March 16, 1968, he thought he was following orders. He was told the area was occupied wholly by the "enemy." His orders were to make a rapid sweep through the area and to destroy all the "enemy" so he wouldn't have them at his back. He didn't feel, he said, as if he were "killing humans."

After the massacre, he began to feel "cocky" and "told a few people off." The orders suddenly recalling him to the United States didn't deflate him.

"I'd gone through 17 months in a combat area and you just don't build yourself up on hopes or try to out-guess what the Army's got for you," he explained. "I was going back to the big headquarters. I had no guilt in my mind. I didn't honestly think I was going there for anything. I was going to get there and be very happily surprised."

The thought occurred to him, nevertheless, that he might be questioned about what went wrong at My Lai. "I told them if General Westmoreland (then the Army chief) wants to know anything about tactical operations or if we've made a mistake anywhere, I'm there to do everything in the world I can to sit down and help. But that wasn't what they were after. I was never asked my opinion."

Drug role

The psychiatrists, however, were eager to get Calley's opinion. One asked whether marijuana or narcotics could have contributed to the killer craze at My Lai.

Calley replied that he was unaware of any marijuana smoking before or during the operation. He explained:

"You grab a handful of cigarettes off a guy. All you could do is tromp 'em into the mud on him. Then, of course, you've got a morale problem. The lieutenant's running around stomping on all of our cigarettes. My troops think I'm the fall guy. I had no support from higher, so I didn't concern myself with the problem."

But on reflection, Calley regretted his apathy over drugs. "Gosh, I mean it's a terrible tragedy because I didn't go into it," he said. "If that was the cause of something irregular at My Lai, then it made me a very poor commander for not going into it."

Poignant remark

Calley's most poignant remark wasn't recorded. But when he was away from the tape recorders, the doctors quoted him as asking anxiously: "I would like to have the three of you doctors tell me whether or not I can have the same killer impulses today as I had in Vietnam, because I would feel very bad if I suddenly found myself accused of killing my neighbors and their children."

This question still hangs heavily over Calley. Is he a psychotic who would kill under stress and who, therefore, wasn't morally responsible for the My Lai horror? Or is he a product of the U.S. military system who would follow orders blindly and kill helpless civilians in cold blood?

The Army psychiatrists, who examined Calley, detected personality problems and reported he "tends to reason and problem-solve in a rather simplistic 'either-or' fashion." But they concluded: "There is no psychosis, no neurosis, no pattern of behavior deviant enough to label him as having a personality disorder."

At least three civilian psychiatrists came to the opposite conclusion. The strongest opinion was stated by Dr. Albert A. LaVerne of New York City, who declared:

'Very disturbed'

"Calley at this time is very disturbed, lacking insight, impairment of judgment, denial of reality and full of hostility and the viciousness of a rabid, mad dog killer."

We discussed the secret Calley tapes with his attorney, George W. Latimer, who rejected LaVerne's findings. "It wasn't a question of insanity or of Calley's mental processes not working," said Latimer. "It was a question of what might happen to anyone who goes through the horrifying experience of war."

The U.S. Court of Military Appeals will review the Calley case probably in October. Then President Nixon has promised to make his own final review.

The tragic Calley, meanwhile, is awaiting the outcome numbly. The psychiatrists asked him about the future and the secret tapes record his reply. "To be honest," he said, "I have no idea. If the case were dropped tomorrow, I would walk around like a dumb idiot."

Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — You're coming to New York and you're interested in The Theater. As is our annual custom, we recommend what we consider the best in stage entertainment and where best you might have dinner before or after theater; please remember curtain time in the Bdwy. theaters is mostly 7:30 p.m., matinees at 2 p.m. generally, on Wednesday and Saturdays. In the old days when the Theater Guild was a viable, even a dominant force in the legitimate theater — its matinees always were on Thursdays; in our early days, attending the Bdwy. theater, down from exotic Buffalo, it was possible to see nine shows a week because of the Theater Guild's independent scheduling of matinees on Thursdays.

At one time, a Broadway show that had matinees on Sunday usually was near the end of a long run or making a desperate late try for an audience. In those dear departed pleasant years, it was possible to stimulate a show into the hit class — "Abie's Irish Rose," "Roberta" — by assorted means: cutprice tickets, a good song which might catch the public's ear via radio, a wily publicity program, various attention-catching strategies which might make a struggling show seem to have audience appeal.

That's not quite possible these days — the public wants Hits.

Once a delightful musical such as "Roberta," which caught mild reviews, could hang in there on the confidence of a producer such as Max Gordon, whose optimism turned out to be deserved as "She Gets In Your Eyes" became a huge hit on radio and drew the public's attention to a certainly superb Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein II score. It took Max six weeks to turn the red ink black; it made great stars out of its top actors — Bob Hope, Fred MacMurray, George Murphy, Tamara — and great profits for Max Gordon.

Today, because of the menacing publicity Broadway has received, shows have agitated their schedules to offer more matinees; some shows have four a week and four evening performances. This takes away some of the fear of the Broadway night, which isn't so terrorizing as it was, by far. So when seeking theater tickets make certain of your curtain times.

"Irene" is a big, colorful musical with great vintage songs and Debbie Reynolds and Patsy Kelly in spectacular performances. It's at the big new Minskoff Theater on W. 44th St., close to Sardi's, the top theatrical restaurant, where the food is good, the prices short of stratospheric, a good value. Vincent Sardi or Jimmy will be on the door. Reservations suggested. The hallowed Algonquin Hotel also is fine for dinner, only a block away at 44th St.

"A Little Night Music" is at the Shubert Theater; fine performances, witty lyrics and book, great scenery.

"Pippin" is at the Imperial, and a great old steakhouse, Frankie & Johnnie's, is very close on W. 45th St., looks like a speakeasy from the old days, which it was. Superb steaks, chops, friendly service; Barbetta, most beautiful Italian restaurant in New York, is handy on W. 46th St. "Pippin" is the most excitingly staged musical of the year with a brilliant performance by Ben Vereen.

"Prisoner of 2nd Ave." is Neil Simon's holdover for two seasons, a comically bitter commentary on the menace of Manhattan.

"Sleuth" is the best chiller in years, perhaps ever; it's at the Music Box Theater. Act One, a splashy, modern, convenient restaurant atop the old Times Tower with the best view of Broadway possible, is convenient to most theaters.

"The Sunshine Boys" is another Neil Simon bonanza at the Longacre Theater, one theater away from Shubert Alley.

"That Championship Season" is at The Booth, and it's fine contemporary drama with solid, experienced insight into the modern lower depths.

The star-jammed "Uncle Vanya" (George C. Scott, Julie Christie etc.) is at the Joseph Levine Theater on W. 51 St. Try La Scala on 54th St. near 7th Ave., a two-minute sprint away, fine Italian food, good quick service.

Judge fines IBM $150,000 for contempt of court

NEW YORK (UPI) — International Business Machines Corp., Wednesday was fined $150,000 a day for contempt of court until it turns over to the Federal Court documents demanded by the Justice Department in order to press its antitrust action against IBM.

Chief Judge David N. Edelstein found IBM guilty of contempt and ordered the fine in a pretrial proceeding. Justice Department lawyers had asked for a fine of 5 per cent of IBM's daily earnings, an estimated $177,000 a day. The company's lawyers had suggested a token fine of $100 a day.

Edelstein's order stated flatly that the court would not issue any stay of the order and attorneys in the case said a civil contempt order against a corporation in a pre-trial action cannot be appealed.

IBM's lawyers had argued they should be personally found in contempt and the corporation should be judged guilty of criminal contempt, if any, so the judge's order could be appealed.

The IBM lawyers argued they had a right to keep documents because they related to confidential communications between the company and its lawyers. The company offered to submit them to a three-lawyer panel previously appointed by the judge in order to determine which of the documents were actually privileged to retain as confidential.

But Edelstein ruled IBM had forfeited all right to such privilege when it gave the documents to Control Data Corp. of Minneapolis as part of the settlement of that company's antitrust suit against IBM.

The IBM lawyers argued unsuccessfully that the federal judge in the Control Data case had granted it protection from the results of this act.

IBM refused to comment on Edelstein's ruling.

Red river new name for Lehigh?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Lehigh River will run red Monday as hydrologists from the U.S. Department of the Interior begin a series of dye tests along a 77-mile stretch to monitor pollution.

Injections of the harmless red dye, known as Rhodamine WT, will be made at the Francis Walter Reservoir on the Luzerne-Carbon Counties border, Rockport, Jim Thorpe, Weiders Crossing at state Rte. 873 and Coplay near Allentown.

Samples will be taken at White Haven, Jim Thorpe, Weiders Crossing, Coplay, Bethlehem and Easton.

$1 billion in non-rail assets

Penn Central won't sell property

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Penn Central Railroad is scrapping a plan to sell its $1 billion in non-rail assets in favor of retaining them to "maximize" their value through development, a trustee of the bankrupt carrier testified Wednesday.

Jervis Langdon, one of three Penn Central trustees, told a federal judge the change on primarily real estate assets was motivated by two factors. One, he said, was that sale of the assets alone would not make the railroad viable. Secondly, the railroad's problems have had a "depressing effect" on the real estate values of the carrier, he added.

Langdon testified at a hearing before U. S. District Judge John P. Fullam on a trustees petition to retain the firm of Victor H. Palmieri, of Los Angeles, as realty advisor and consultant. Palmieri, 43, president of Victor Palmieri & Co., Inc., has been president of the Pennsylvania Co. (Pennco), non-rail arm of the railroad for the past two and a half years.

Under the terms of a three-year agreement contemplated with Palmieri, his company would be paid $150,000 a year in management fees against one per cent of sales exceeding $15 million yearly.

The court took the Penn Central's petition to retain the Los Angeles firm under advisement.

Langdon said Palmieri's firm was an "absolute natural" for the assignment of seeking "full development of the value of our real estate."

"Palmieri's firm has both the real estate and administrative skill," Langdon said. He added that the firm had done a "magnificent job" in turning Pennco around.

Langdon told the court that the Palmieri program was necessary to "maximize" the railroad's real estate holdings. He described the policy change on non-rail assets as a "reinvestment of energies into real estate."

The non-rail assets of Penn Central comprised more than 10,000 individual parcels and include mid-Manhattan hotels, land under Park Ave. skyscrapers in New York, abandoned passenger terminals, marshalling yards, coal lands, warehouses and farm land.

Bernard C. Meltzer, local real estate consultant under Mayor Frank L. Rizzo, told the court the railroad's present real estate board if "beefed up" with 40 additional personnel and a full-time consultant, "could do a 'better job at less cost'" than the Palmieri firm.

Disaster aid changes urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress was urged Wednesday to replace current federal disaster relief programs with a streamlined alternative designed to ease the financial burden on both victims and government. Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., appeared before a House subcommittee on housing in support of his legislation which would establish the National Catastrophic Disaster Insurance Act of 1973.

Flood's hometown of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was devastated last summer by Susquehanna River flood waters whipped up by Tropical Storm Agnes.

He said such a national system would reduce the reliance of state and local governments and individuals and businesses on federal assumption of losses resulting from natural catastrophes.

Convict kills inmate

McALESTER, Okla. (UPI) — A convict fatally knifed another inmate and gang fights broke out Wednesday as prisoners roamed free in the muddy yard of the Oklahoma State Prison.

"We haven't got any way to keep them from killing each other, if that's what they want to do," an official said.

The new violence occurred within sight of highway patrol officers and National Guardsmen, who were ordered not to attack because prison officials believed it would cause more deaths.

"Officers could have gone in and tried to rescue that man but we would have killed any number of men to do it," said Ed Hardy, an aide of Gov. David Hall. The dead man — the fourth victim of violence that started last Friday — was killed early Wednesday in an area of the yard inside the prison where 750 rebellious convicts were being held.

"We've got 750 men in there and we're not going to lose a couple of highway patrolmen to rescue some inmates who can't get along among themselves," Hardy said. "We haven't got any way to keep them from killing each other if that's what they want to do."

Essentially, what happens in a time of major disaster under the current program of disaster assistance, is that the federal government ends up virtually owning the community lock, stock and barrel," according to Flood.

The congressman said disaster victims presently "become financially indebted to the federal government at enormous governmental expense and at enormous psychological expense to the victim."

"He is made the recipient of governmental largesse — of charity," Flood added.

A key feature of Flood's measure is a surcharge provision, which the lawmaker said would be less expensive than either disaster loans with forgiveness features of flood insurance.

"By spreading the risk factor nationwide by creating a fund which is self-sustaining, the current raid on the Treasury caused by the disaster loan system will come to a halt," Flood explained.

Flood said the new system would give a property owner protection up to the amount of his present property insurance at a cheaper rate.

The new bill would also create an assistant administrator for disaster relief within the office of the federal insurance administrator who would be responsible for supervising the maintenance of a national disaster insurance fund.

Skylab crew feeling better

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skylab's astronauts, feeling much better Wednesday, joked with ground controllers during a televised meal and settled into the research routine of the two-month flight.

Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma conducted the first medical experiments on their first busy workday in the 118-foot space station orbiting 270 miles above earth.

The pilots obviously enjoyed the meal in the small kitchen. Bean and Garriott interrupted the snack to adjust the camera and microphone but Lousma continued eating.

"We're noticing down here that nothing stops Jack from eating," ground communicator Story Musgrave said, referring to Lousma's earlier stomach troubles.

"You can talk all you want to, but first things first," Lousma replied. "Food tastes better today."

Garriott turned away from the triangular dinner table to talk with mission control and earth viewers watched his biscuit float off his tray. When he turned back, the biscuit had disappeared and he looked puzzled. He finally retrieved the biscuit and spread peanut butter and jam on it.

Bean floated upside down during part of the meal showing the astronauts were recovering from their bout with space age sickness.

Garriott, an electrical engineer acting as the crew's medic, said no one had needed antinausea medication to combat motion sickness since Monday. "We're all feeling in very good shape," he said.

Lousma, a Marine major who has had the hardest struggle adapting to the new weightless environment, was eating six small meals so he wouldn't get too full and possibly upset his stomach. Bean had five little meals and Garriott, four.

The medical experiments were designed to give ground physicians information on how the astronauts were adapting to weightlessness and if they will be able to perform a delayed spacewalk Saturday. Garriott and Lousma will go outside to set up a new sun shade over Skylab and reload film in the sun-watching telescopes while Bean stays inside to monitor the stations systems.

Roadway hazard

COVINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Kenton County Circuit Judge Robert O. Lukowsky has banned x-rated movies for safety reasons.

The judge told the Dixie Gardens Drive-In to quit showing the films because the "nude scenes were distracting motorists on nearby Interstate Highway 75."

Snow was picked up by Police Chief Robert LaBar and Ptl. Danny Whitesell on a complaint filed by Kathryn M. Wiltz of Mountainhome. The alleged incident occurred on the Wiebott Road in Mountainhome at 9 p.m. Monday.

Snow was arraigned before District Magistrate Clara Pope of Mount Pocono and committed to the Monroe County Jail in lieu of $5,000 bail. He waived his preliminary hearing and will be held for grand jury action.

Pope said Snow was previously free on $2,500 bail on an assault charge against the same woman.

Accident victims uninjured

WIND GAP — Four Hokenauqua persons were treated and released at Easton Hospital following a one-car accident on Rte. 33 at 11:45 a.m. Tuesday.

State police at Easton said Mrs. Sally A. Atwell, 34, was driving south on Rte. 33 when she lost control with the car flipping on its roof.

The driver, and her passengers, two of them her children, Donald, 11 and Terry, 15 along with Judy Duchella, were removed from the scene by the Wind Gap ambulance. A passing motorist, Samuel McQuillan of Middletown, Conn., helped get the uninjured out of the car.

Police said the Wind Gap Fire Co. was called to wash down the road.

Pa. Dutch Farm Festival features old-time activities

KEMPTON — Pine tar burning to straw bee hive making — that's just a slice of craft activity that will unfold at the ninth annual Pennsylvania Dutch Farm Festival on Sept. 8 and 9 at the Kempton Farm Museum grounds.

The festival, under the direction of museum curator Howard Geisinger, will have over 50 craftsmen participating.

Geisinger, who stresses authenticity, notes that in addition to the re-creation of the lost art of pine tar burning, other old and difficult tasks will include lace making, soap making and quilt making.

Visitors to the festival will be able to see the shearing of sheep, caring of bees, even the milking of cows the way it was done generations ago.

A typical barnyard containing old-fashioned implements and machinery, many of the pieces in action, will also be part of the festival scene.

Pennsylvania Dutch food is famous the world over and is a big reason why the Kempton festival has become popular. Such delights as funnel cakes and apple butter are made right on the scene. Full course meals such as old-fashioned chicken pot pie are also served.

Also scheduled for the festival is an antique flea market. Crafts and wares will be for sale under the barn eaves.

Woman injured slightly in Wayne two-car crash

LAKE ARIEL — A woman was slightly injured in a two-car accident on Rte. 191 near Lake Ariel late Tuesday afternoon.

State police at Honesdale reported a vehicle operated by Eldwin Oliver, 58, of 1231 West St., Honesdale was traveling north on the highway at an apparently high rate of speed at 4:30 p.m. when it struck a vehicle operated by Tina Turouski, 17, of Lake Ariel, R.D. 2.

Oliver reportedly failed to see the Turouski vehicle, which had slowed to make a turn, and struck the car from the rear. Damages were estimated at $2,000 to the Oliver car and $1,800 to the Turouski car.

Neither Oliver nor his passenger, Elton Irwin, 57, of 1216 Dyberry Place, Honesdale were injured.

Miss Turouski was treated and released at Wayne County Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. James C. Vogt

Vogt-Babeor wedding held in New Jersey

PASSAIC, N.J. — A reception at the Pennington Club, Passaic, followed the wedding Saturday afternoon of Miss Paulette Babeor of Clifton and James Charles Vogt of Cresco, Pa. in St. Paul's R. C. Church, Clifton.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Babeor, 322 Washington Avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Vogt.

Mrs. Daniel Gioia was matron of honor and Anthony Caprioli served as best man. The bridegroom's sister, Kim, was bridesmaid and the bride's brothers, John and

The bride carried a mixed bouquet and wore an ivory silk organza gown trimmed with Venice lace and ruffles. A picture hat held her veil.

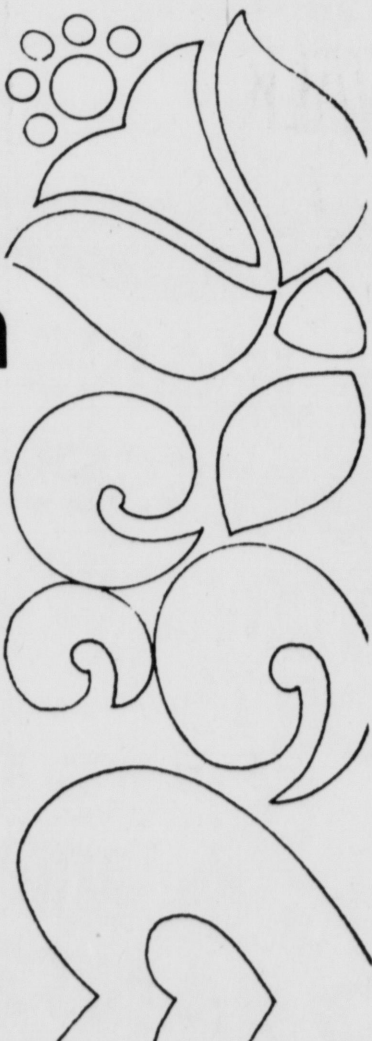

The newlyweds left on a wedding trip to New Orleans. Both received B. S. degrees in foreign service from Georgetown University School of Foreign Service.

Mrs. Vogt is on the staff of Rep. Don H. Clausen of California, in Washington, D. C. Her husband was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army Reserve Military Intelligence.

A lesson in folk art

By PHYLLIS FIAROTTA

Previous columns have offered projects in the American craft of patchwork. Now explore another facet of American handicrafts, Folk Art. Past generations of Dutch and German settlers painted gay and whimsical designs on wooden furniture and tin utensils. Try your hand at it.

The design shown, the Dutch Tulip, can decorate any wooden surface from a dresser drawer to the backs of wooden chairs. Just use your imagination.

1. Give the selected piece of furniture a fresh coating of semi-gloss latex paint. Follow instructions on the can. Choose a light tone paint.
2. Dry overnight.
3. Cut out the pattern pictured. If necessary, enlarge or reduce, as desired.
4. Tape a sheet of carbon paper to the intended surface, carbon side facing the wood.
5. Tape the design over the carbon paper, design facing up.
6. With a firm hand, trace along the lines of the design with a pencil. For curved surfaces, such as the chair shown, you might have to shift the design slightly as you go.
7. The design should be painted with oil base paints. Purchase small inexpensive containers of model paints at your hobby counters.

8. Do not feel timid because you do not have a firm painting hand. Folk art designs should have a primitive, non-professional look.
9. Paint the designs in reds, oranges, browns and olives.
10. When dry, antique the chair by painting on a walnut wood stain (not varnish stain).

Wipe off the stain immediately with a soft cloth. The stain deepens the tone of the paint. Do not wipe off the excess stain that gets trapped in the furniture's recessed or carved areas. This adds depth.

Is there a craft project you would like to see detailed in this column, or a craft technique you'd like to know more about? Send your suggestion to The Leisure Craftsman, care of this newspaper.

Snow White joins old dolls on collector's item lists

EAST STROUDSBURG — "Oh, You Beautiful Doll" could be one of the old refrains used as background music for the 29th Pocono Mountains Antique Show and Sale beginning Wednesday, Aug. 8th and continuing through Friday, Aug. 10th in the gymnasium of the East Stroudsburg High School.

Dolls of every conceivable shape and size will lure doll fanciers and collectors who will find that this year the original Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs dolls have joined the doll Hall of Fame.

Although not genuine antiques, they are collectors' items, and Mrs. Seymour Katz of the Den of Antiquity has informed the committee that they most certainly are valuable and scarce. She will have the whole "kit and kaboodle" in her booth.

Annette Winner of Huntington Valley will have among her doll treasures the famed Shoenhut name in the doll world, plus bisque and wax dolls.

Kay Baker of Endicott, New York will bring Gwen Louise, gowned in satin for her wedding day, and Hardwick, who most certainly could be the bridegroom in his velvet jacket and brocade shirt.

Kay Baker might have the best man for the wedding party in a blonde male doll with a jacket of blue crushed velvet, and a blue brocade shirt as HE is carrying an umbrella.

What is a doll without a carriage or a cradle? Frank Kerr of Minisink Hills will bring both... a wicker baby carriage with a parasol, and an old walnut doll cradle, large enough to be the new haven for a new real live doll.

The Weders of Upper Black Eddy will satisfy the longing of those who wish to return to the days of the doll house on a rainy afternoon. The Weders have fabulous miniatures... doll furniture, tiny animals... and the fascinating paper dolls of old.

Bob Godshall of Fairview Village will bring salesmen's samples... miniature cupboards, ranges, refrigerators and furniture that so delight the collector of mementoes of the teeny tiny world of the lilliputian people.

Real "live" dolls, the members of the Auxiliary of the General Hospital, will serve homemade suppers and snacks in the high school cafeteria.

Mrs. Franklin Tolman will head the committee for the "Kitchen Shelf" where shoppers will be able to buy goodies to take home.

Show hours are Aug. 8th and 9th... 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday Aug. 10th, 12 noon to 10 p.m.

All proceeds go to the General Hospital of Monroe County.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

This is the season for family reunions, which usually start as simple one-family affairs bringing home the married children and their progeny on a commonly convenient weekend.

But after 40 or 50 years of reunions, the wide-spreading family tree is so complex that very often there isn't a single person of the original name among the officers.

These long-established reunions also have a long-established system of awarding prizes: oldest, longest married, youngest, most recently married, coming the longest distance, and so forth, often with the prizes going year after year to the same people.

The Beck reunion seems to have come up with some variations for prizes: earliest arrival, most pennies in one's pocket, earliest riser, and most recent car-wash... all of which should distribute the prizes a little differently.

But for the sake of the second oldest in line, it might be well to retain the "oldest person present" award.

After all if you've patiently sat by year after year while the same person collected the crocheted coat-hangers, bath powder, pin cushions or shaving cream, and then by the process of attrition you finally move into the top spot, it would be pretty discouraging to have them abolish the honor.

Yacht Club fetes all on its 17th birthday

LAKE WALLENPAUPACK — The Lake Wallenpaupack Yacht Club was the scene of "Everybody's Birthday Party" on Saturday. Each of the 70 members attending brought a birthday gift for exchange, and after a covered-dish dinner, committee members paraded into the main room each bearing a birthday cake lighted with 17 candles, denoting the fact that the Yacht Club is 17 years old.

Dan Milazzo, Leroux representative, added to the festivities by providing a cordial for each party-goer, a small sewing kit for each of the ladies, and recipe booklets for all. He also presented a movie, "A Cordial Party", featuring many movie and T.V. stars.

A special gift went to Dick Scholl, the only one present whose actual birthday it was.

The program, which ended with games and dancing, was under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Mason and Dr. and Mrs. Frank Uridel, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hettes, Dr. and Mrs. John Larson, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lindsay, and Miss Suzy Porter.

A cocktail party, dinner and dance on Saturday, July 21, originally scheduled as "Cruise Night", was also well attended by members and their guests.

The fact that the "Cruise" feature was cancelled due to rainy weather failed to dampen their spirits as they progressed by car, instead of cruiser, from a cocktail party at the clubhouse to Tanglewood Lodge for dinner and back to the club for dancing to the music of the LJJ's. The accordionist of this group, John Nicholson, accompanied the party to the Tanglewood Lodge, providing music there. Hosts for the affair were Commodore and Mrs. Charles Traverse of Waynewood Lake.

Dr. and Mrs. John V. Rowley, of Livingston, N.J., are new members.

Ann Landers

Missing parts

Dear Ann Landers: The things I've learned from your column! Recently you printed a letter from a woman who wondered why a person who has lost a finger or an arm or a foot can still feel pain in the part of his body that is missing. Your explanation of "phantom pain" was very illuminating. And now I am dying of curiosity about another matter but I'm too ashamed to ask anybody.

Will you please tell me what the hospitals do with the dismembered parts of the body? I hope you won't consider this too macabre to deal with in the column. Others must be interested, too.

Knowledge Un-Lmtd

Dear K: All amputated members as well as organs are incinerated after a sample has been taken for the pathologist. Tissue committees are interested in learning whether or not the organ or member was diseased as stated in the diagnosis. (A doctor who removes a healthy breast, for example, is in serious trouble.)

In special instances, Moslems or members of the Orthodox Jewish faith request the amputated member be saved. It is then buried in the ground in accordance with the "ashes to ashes, dust to dust" tradition.

Dear Ann Landers: A few months ago my husband and I inherited a modest sum from my grandmother. To listen to my mother and aunts talk you'd think we had come into a million dollars and that we are nitwits. Every other day someone suggests a project we should donate to — or a business investment that will pay large dividends.

Last week two nephews asked us to put them through college. Yesterday a niece who will be a high school senior next Fall let us know that she has already picked out her high school graduation present. Would you believe a trip to Europe?

First we thought it was funny. Now it is no longer a joke. Any suggestions on how to deal with all the unwanted "advice"?

Ft. Lauderdale

Dear F.L.: Nothing creates interest like inherited money. I suggest that you inform the self-appointed investment counselors that you already have plans for the money and those who are looking for a helping hand should be told to check the end of their sleeves.

Monster grabber

By Jean Adams

MONSTER: (Q.) Freddy has turned into quite a monster. His hands are all over me and he won't take "NO" for an answer. I feel dirty and guilty after a date with him.

Why don't I break up with him? I can't. My mother likes him. She says he comes from an "honorable" family and she won't believe he is anything but a "real nice boy."

When Freddy calls for a date and I answer the phone I tell him I'm busy, but when she gets to the phone first she tells him to come right on over.

He does, and I have to wrestle him again. I don't always win. What can I do? This is driving me crazy.

17 in Pennsylvania

(A.) Tell your mother that if you keep going with Freddy you are going to end up with an illegitimate child and it won't be your fault — it will be hers. Ask her to face the fact that he is NOT a nice boy and to quit making dates with him for you.

With some mothers a girl must be blunt.

MEMORIES: (Q.) I went out with Ted for three months. I fell deeply in love with him, but he was very casual about me. This hurt me badly and we discontinued dating.

After that I met Bernie and we both have been very happy together. We have been going together now for six months, and plan to be married in the distant future.

One night Ted saw me out with Bernie. Ever since then he has been calling me and asking for another chance. I tell him it's no use and not to call me again, but he just doesn't get the picture.

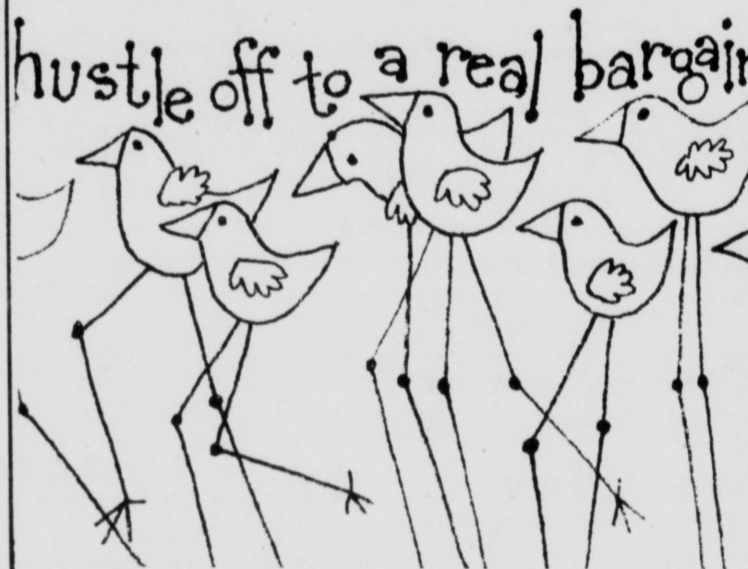

Bernie is 21. Ted is 24.

One Too Many in New York

(A.) You seem to be working at loving Bernie. Love is not something you have to work at. It is either there or it isn't.

Do not marry Bernie until you test those feelings you have left for Ted and know beyond a doubt that there is none of that deep love left in them. The reason I say this is that if you now felt only casually about Ted I do not believe you would bother to write me about him.

Study Social Security hike

By a 69er

Now that Social Security has made important increases in its services and benefits it may be well to study these changes even though they will not be effective for several months. Many new people will benefit and the Social Security Administration wants to hear immediately from who believe they can be helped.

To begin with, the added regular benefits are as follows:

1. Starting July 1, 1974 an increase of about 5.6 per cent will be given on all Social Security checks.

2. Beginning January 1, 1974 the amount a Social Security pensioner may earn without having his benefits reduced will be increased from $2,100 to $2,400.

So much for the increased benefits. But a very valuable new service for all of us with a very low income will begin January 1, 1974. This is the conversion of the present financial section of the state public assistance program to an improved Federal program under the Social Security Administration.

It will simplify and supplement the service to the low-income elderly person and to all blind and disabled persons of any age.

Its aim is to provide added payments so that every individual over 65 will have an income of at least $130 a month and every couple will

Big demand

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Demand for California wine has the state's vintners growing more grapes, but the supply is not likely to exceed demand within the next three years, according to an economist from the University of California's Agricultural Extension.

Dr. Kirby S. Moulton said there "is little doubt but what vines currently in the ground can be absorbed readily in a growing market" for wine grapes. He noted that California wine grape plantings in 1971 were double that of 1970 and it appeared the 1972 plantings were 50 per cent higher than the previous year.

have $195 a month — unless partially supported by other persons. However, if your income as an individual or a couple is over these amounts you are not eligible.

Only those with the greatest need are eligible for this Supplementary Security Program.

But if you are under great financial stress be sure to study these facts:

1. If you already are getting State Public Assistance or Aid to the Blind or Aid to the Disabled you do not need to apply for added benefits under this new program. This will automatically be granted to you later this year.

2. If you are not on an assistance program but your income is very low, then apply immediately to your nearest Social Security office (see list below) and get personal attention. The Allentown office alone estimates 4,000 people in its area, mostly elderly, are not on assistance and should apply for these added benefits.

Remember these points:

A. If you live alone you may own "things" with a value up to $1,500 and still be eligible. A couple may own assets up to $2,250 and still get payments.

B. Note that your owned home "of reasonable value" will not be counted as an asset. Personal effects or household goods, moderate insurance or a car will not be counted.

C. On the other hand, you must count as income Social Security checks, pension, savings, annuities, stock, jewels and gifts.

So much for your assets and income — now what does the new service offer? To begin with, the first $20 a month of income from Social Security checks, pensions, etc. generally will not affect the Federal payment at all.

For instance, living alone, if your only monthly income is from Social Security amounting to $114.50, you subtract $20 from this and get $94.50 to help you find out what you will receive under the new program. Since the Federal program wants you to have at least $130 (plus $20) you subtract $94.50 from $130 and you find you will receive $35.50. Thus your total income will be $35.50 plus $114.50, or $150.00.

In addition, for people who are working part-time, the first $65 a month of their earnings will not effect their Federal payments. Over that amount only half of the earnings will be counted.

For instance: living alone, let us say your Social Security check is as shown above ($114.50) and you earn $100 a month besides. This is your total income. The new program doesn't count the first $65 of that $100 so you are listed as earning only $35. On that, only half will be counted — $17.50. So now you no longer will receive $35.50 (as above) but must reduce that by $17.50. You now will receive $18. But your total income will be $18 plus $114.50 plus $100, or a total of $232.50. But remember, your eligibility in this case would be based on only $94.50 plus $17.50 — $112.

Area Social Security offices are: Allentown, 123 N. 13th St., 433-7591; Bethlehem, 19 E. Elizabeth Ave. 691-5114; Easton (includes Monroe County) 200 Ferry St., 215-258-4351; Hazleton (includes Carbon County) 88 S. Laurel St. 717-455-9541.

STROUDSBURG — Rev. John J. Bendik, 906 Main St., Stroudsburg, and W. Jack Wallie, 28 Lions Street, East Stroudsburg, have been selected as Outstanding Young Men of America for 1973.

Now in its ninth year, Outstanding Young Men of America is an annual biographical compilation sponsored by leading men's civic, service and professional organizations. The awards volume features some 7,000 young men from across the country.

Criteria for inclusion are service to others, professional excellence, business advancement, charitable activities and civic recognition. Those eligible must be between the ages of 21 and 35 years.

Ronald L. Zeigler, White House press chief and author of the introductory statement in the 1972 volume, has said of the publication, "The thousands of young Americans whose stories are told in these pages represent only a sampling of the talent that is powering this country into the seventies."

"I know that each of them is less a book of praise — though praise it is, and well-deserved — than a volume of challenge."

Nominations for the awards publication are made by civic organizations, Jaycee chapters, college alumni associations and military commandants.

The 1973 edition, scheduled for publication and national distribution in October, will include an introductory message by Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem II, commander of Maxwell AFB in Montgomery, Ala.

Bond boom continues

PHILADELPHIA — Pennsylvanians spent $54,694,494 on Series E and H United States Savings Bonds during June 1973. They've spent over a third of a billion dollars on bonds since the beginning of this year.

Of the total amount, residents of Monroe County purchased $199,596 worth. Pike, with $25,324, and Wayne County, with $98,099, were outdistanced by the residents of Northampton County, who spent $1,564,791.

Series E bonds are purchased in multiples of $25, up to $1,000. If the buyer holds the bond until its maturity (five years, 10 months), he receives five and a half per cent interest.

Series H bonds, in denominations of $500, $1,000 and $5,000, pay five and a half per cent every six months if the bonds are held ten years.

The U. S. Treasury Department expects the sale of Savings Bonds in Pennsylvania to reach $629,200,000 by the end of this year.

So you've been wet lately? Find out just how much

By BEN GELBER

STROUDSBURG — For the past two years or so, the weather in the Monroe County area seems to have resembled the weather found in tropical rain forests rather than that found in the hills of Northeastern Pennsylvania.

With only a few exceptions, the local area has had month after month of above normal precipitation, along with an unusual lack of sunshine.

In 1971 the county recorded the third wettest year this century. Not being satisfied with that distinction, 68.76 inches of rain dropped in the area last year, a mark unequalled for the county in this century.

Why has the resort area, which depends so strongly on good weather, been so plagued? Part of the reason is that the weather pattern has been such lately as to favor the development of strong and energetic storms.

Another factor is location. Monroe County is the wettest spot in the entire Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

The county is located at the convergence of several major storm tracks. The Poconos are close enough to the Atlantic Ocean to catch the brunt of generally vigorous storms moving up the coast. Also, the county is far enough north to feel the effects of storms and frontal systems which take the other popular course through the Great Lakes.

Most Pocono residents live either on or next to a mountain. This too has some bearing on the dubious rainfall honors. Mountains as high as the Poconos can greatly affect weather conditions because air is forced to rise to get over them, thus causing the air to condense.

The condensation activity means clouds and snow showers in winter, and clouds and thundershowers in the summer, when the right (or wrong, depending on one's outlook) conditions prevail.

According to statistics, Mount Pocono leads the state with a 51-inch annual average rainfall, followed closely by Tamaqua and Stroudsburg. As a matter of fact, areas with annual averages of 50 inches are rather rare in the East until one reaches coastal Virginia.

At the present time it is obvious that the Poconos area is the wrong place to live if one is a fanatic sun worshiper.

However, it is possible to take heart in the situation. Weather extremes have a habit of working their way back to normal, which means that the persistent wet weather can't last forever. Or can it?

Stroud Twp. agrees to join Council of Governments

STROUDSBURG — Stroud Township became the fourth municipality to ratify membership in the Council of Governments (COG) Wednesday.

Supervisors unanimously passed a resolution joining the "cooperative group for civil affairs," according to J. Nelson Westbrook, board chairman.

East Stroudsburg, Stroudsburg and Smithfield Township have already ratified the COG concept. Delaware Water Gap will complete the group if it passes a concurring resolution Monday.

According to Westbrook, the group is being formed "because there is more power in a group than in individual governments."

"We feel we can get more accomplished on common problems if we act together," said Westbrook. A number of municipalities, Westbrook noted, also have more political clout than one township or borough.

In other action Wednesday, supervisors accepted a $15,794 bid from Ray Hartmann and Sons, East Stroudsburg, to construct a metal building to accommodate township vehicles.

Two other bids were received: one from Wind Gap

Builders for $20,000 and one from Arm Brewster, Inc. for $27,683.

The building, to be 70 by 33 feet, will be built on township property north of Bridge Street.

Supervisors commended their recreation staff for a "very satisfactory" summer township recreation program. The program, held at Arlington and Clearview Elementary Schools, will end on Friday.

The board said the program will definitely be considered for next summer.

"In fact," said Westbrook, "We're thinking about a winter program of skating on the pond behind the township building."

Supervisors okayed two subdivision plans: a one-acre subdivision from Federated Homes and Mortgage Co., owners of the proposed Holiday Inn in Bartonsville; and a one-acre subdivision of Thomas Rislow and Lawrence Green's property.

ARCO sets gas policy

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Atlantic Richfield Company Wednesday announced that allocation of available gasoline supplies in August in all of its marketing areas will be limited to 100 per cent of sales volumes during the comparable calendar month of 1972.

Scotrun man killed in crash

CANADENSIS — Thomas A. Thiel, 46, of Scotrun was killed Wednesday morning in a truck accident on Rte. 390 in Barrett Township.

Thiel, a delivery agent for Tri-State News Co. of East Stroudsburg, was driving his delivery van south on Rte. 390 at 6:20 a.m. Wednesday when he failed to negotiate a curve about one-half mile north of Canadensis.

Thiel was thrown from the truck, and the vehicle then turned over on top of him. Monroe County Coroner Daniel G. Warner declared Thiel dead at the scene.

Investigation was conducted by the Barrett Township police.

Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., Thiel was the son of Mrs. Florence (Pettit) Thiel Abate, Brooklyn, and the late William Thiel.

He was a U. S. Coast Guard veteran of World War II.

Prior to moving to Monroe County, Thiel lived in Islip Terrace, N. Y., and was employed as a supervisor at Canteen Corp. in the Bronx, N. Y.

Survivors in addition to his mother and widow include a son, Thomas W., Center Beach, N. Y.; and four daughters, Susan, Lynn, Lorraine and Phyllis, all at home.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later by the Lanterman Funeral Home, 27 Washington St., East Stroudsburg.

Two men arrested in church

CANADENSIS — Two men were arrested by Barrett Township police during an attempted break-in at a Canadensis Church early Wednesday morning.

Jerry Houston, 29, who gave his address as Room 20, Maryhill Lodge, Paradise Valley, was charged with attempted burglary. Joseph J. Altiero, 33, of the same address, was charged with conspiracy.

Barrett Township police were patrolling in the Canadensis area about 3 a.m., when they noticed a suspicious vehicle parked next to St. Bernadette's Catholic Church.

Stopping to investigate, the patrolmen found Houston in the church office and Altiero waiting outside the building. Both were immediately arrested. An initial check showed no church property stolen.

A search is continuing for a third man who Houston and Altiero said was also present but unobserved by police.

The pair were arraigned before dawn at the office of District Magistrate Earl Ammerman in Stroudsburg and committed to the Monroe County Jail.

A hearing before Ammerman has been scheduled for 10:15 p.m. Friday.

The announcement also said that distillate sales will continue to be limited to 100 per cent of year ago volumes in all marketing areas.

The spokesman added that because of a general tightness of supply, there is a need to continue controlling sales of gasoline and distillate.

Haulers turn to state for help

Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — A spokesman for striking liquid waste haulers said Wednesday they are taking their fight for a legal dumping ground to elected state officials.

"We gave the commissioners a chance," said hauler William Halterman of response by Monroe County Commissioner Chairman Mrs. Nancy Shukaitis.

"So now we have to move up the ladder."

Halterman said he would be contacting Rep. William Foster (R-139), Rep. Raphael Musto (D-118) and Sen. T. Newell Wood (R-20) for help.

Six of the nine Monroe County liquid waste haulers said Monday they were going on strike until a suitable disposal site for the sewage they pump from septic and holding tanks is found.

State officials say there are only three ways to get rid of the wastes, by treatment in a sewage treatment plant, incineration or by dumping in an approved site.

There is no readily available sewage treatment plant or incinerator, haulers claim, and they say Department of Environmental Resources regulations make a land disposal site almost impossible to locate and prepare.

Haulers say their requests for assistance have fallen upon deaf ears.

"They (commissioners) are more interested in a bunch of nothing than helping us with our problem," Halterman charged.

"All they want to do is look at animals and birds instead of facing facts. We have been using our heads, why can't they use theirs?"

Haulers say they have been dumping the sewage illegally and have decided to stop, citing the arrest of a hauler as a reason.

Hauler Marland Papillon of Stroudsburg R.D. 1 said he had the forms for a place to dump sewage, but hadn't filled them out.

"I can't see the sense in all of this," Papillon said. "We fill them out, send them in and then they (DER) would just go and change the regulations."

"And for Mrs. Shukaitis. She blames us for the problem but we couldn't get a permit no matter what we tried."

"They don't realize how much of a problem they are going to have unless something is done soon," he added.

Papillon also called for the other haulers in the county to join the six in their strike. He said that he didn't understand why Stroudsburg would let one company, Stauffer and Phillips, dump into its plant and not the others.

"I dumped into their plant up until a couple of years ago," Papillon said. "Then all of a sudden I was told I was through dumping there."

"They told us we couldn't dump any dead sewage in the system, but that's what they (Stauffer and Phillips) have to be putting in."

Both haulers said they have talked to persons throughout the area and their strike plan had been greeted with approval, even though some will eventually have stopped up pipes and overflowing septic tanks.

"This is only the beginning," Halterman advised.

Council gives planners treatment over sewer ban

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg Council uncorked facts about the borough treatment plant Wednesday night and washed away fears of an overload that had been voiced by the planning commission.

Planners suggested a ban on new link-ups to the system at their July 25 meeting after discussing the impact a proposed car wash would have on the treatment plant.

Extracts of the planners' minutes were read to council Wednesday night by Borough Manager Harold Snyder.

The matter came up when planner Arthur Jolley mentioned the new car wash would contribute 1.8 million gallons a year to the borough system.

Planners passed a motion to require new industrial and commercial ventures to submit detailed data on their sewer flow before permitting further construction in the borough.

Snyder said Wednesday night planners were out of their jurisdiction.

He said new enterprises are required by ordinance to submit plans to the borough's consulting engineer for application to the plant.

Consulting engineers for the sewer system are Albright and Friel of Philadelphia.

Status reports from Albright and Friel for the past two years indicate the Stroudsburg system is far from overloaded.

Based on population capacity, the plant is at about 65 per cent of design, capable of accommodating 2,500 people, 1,000 apartments or 700 homes, according to the statistics presented by Snyder.

Over a two year average, the plant pumped 702,000 gallons a day and is designed for 1.29 million gallons a day.

Councilman Chester Gross said of the planners, "They were telling us last week we are overtaxing our sewers. This week they say they are going to ask Hess (borough engineer) about the statistics."

"They don't ask anybody first. They just come out and make statements."

Council decided to make copies of the plant's evaluations available for review by the planning commission.

In other business, the council tabled three bids on a new fire truck pending review by the fire company, appropriated $150 for the 643-member Stroudsburg Area Tennis Assn. and resolved to join a Council of Governments with other municipal bodies in the county.

Council also decided to pursue a request to the state Department of Transportation for installation of a pedestrian traffic button for the signal lights at Ninth and Main Streets expected to cost between $3,000-$4,000.

Approval was granted to hire two borough police officers and Mayor Warren Loney reported the solicitors of Stroudsburg, East Stroudsburg and Stroud Township are hammering out an agreement relating to police jurisdiction.

Loney said the agreement will specify "what it means to go out of boundaries and still be covered."

Protest of troopers' transfer causes changes in plans

FERN RIDGE — Some Troopers at the Fern Ridge state police substation won't be moving to the new facility near Tannersville after all.

Public protest and booming population due to Pocono International Raceway and resorts were the reasons given by state police officials for the policy switch.

Both of the state police troops stationed at the Fern Ridge facility had been slated to move early next year into the new headquarters on Rte. 611.

But now, according to Capt. John Kistler, of Hazleton, Troop N will remain at the Fern Ridge station while the troopers patrolling Interstate 80, Troop S, will move to Tannersville.

Kistler said the 23-man contingent from Troop N would have a new station in the Fern Ridge area as soon as a site is located.

Controversy over both groups moving from Fern Ridge arose in June when a group of citizens formed to fight the switch.

They gathered 600 signatures on a petition to Pennsylvania Governor Milton Shapp asking him to reconsider the moving of troopers and set up meetings with state police officials.

At one of those meetings, held Wednesday, Gerald Patterson, a state police official from Harrisburg, said the total switch to the new station had been called off by State Police Commissioner Col. James Barger.

"We had planned on merging all of the state police in Monroe County into the one barracks at Tannersville," Kistler said. "But with the public outcry and the increased calls, Col. Barger decided to keep Troop N at Fern Ridge.

Kistler said the announcement was made during a meeting in Kidder Township, Carbon County.

Location of mall corrected

STROUDSBURG — You're right if you thought the weekend long experimental mall in downtown Stroudsburg was supposed to be on Main Street from Fifth through Seventh Streets.

In Wednesday's Record we incorrectly had the mall on Main from Sixth to Eighth Streets.

It should also be noted traffic on Sixth Street will be two-way only from Ann Street to Main. Traffic on Sixth Street from Main is one way, that is a northerly direction.

Visitors should also realize the rock concert by "Ryk" will be from 7 to 8 p.m. today with the concert by "The Jolly Rhinelanders" set for 8 to 9 p.m.

Blacktop contract awarded

Mount Pocono Bureau
LONG POND — Tunkhannock Township supervisors Wednesday awarded Herbert R. Imbt the contract for blacktopping township roads.

Imbt's bid was in the amount of $39,185.70. Roads to be paved are: Road 555, two-tenths of a mile; 627, 1 mile; 629, 1.16 miles; 636, .64 miles.

The commission also reported the following officers had been appointed: Larry Moyer, chairman; Clair Witt, vice chairman; and Henry Raymond, secretary-treasurer.

The board unanimously passed a motion to allot $500 as a start for the budget.

Joint fire drill set

STROUDSBURG — The Acme Hose Co. and the Stroudsburg Volunteer Fire Co. will hold a joint fire drill at 7 p.m. Monday at Wyandotte Chemical Co., Stroudsburg.

Kovalick, Jr., 30, Wilkes-Barre, from his demolished car, after he lost control on rain-slick Rte. 80 Wednesday night in Stroudsburg, crossed the median and struck a truck operated by Robert F. Rogier, 51, of Barrington, Mass. Kovalick was listed in serious and Rogier in critical condition at the General Hospital of Monroe County. (Staff photo by Steve Drachler)

Free parking, bus service during mall experiment

STROUDSBURG — Persons working in downtown Stroudsburg are being urged to park their autos in the Stroudsburg High School parking lot and use a free shuttle bus service to the downtown area.

The shuttle will run at regular intervals to and from the business district from 8 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. today and Friday, and from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m. Saturday.

Stroudsburg Businessmen's Association President William Wells said employers were urging, and in some cases ordering, employees to use the school parking lot during the weekend mall experiment.

Shoppers to the downtown area are also being urged to take advantage of the free parking and bus service to ease the expected strain on Stroudsburg's already overburdened parking system during the weekend.

Residents and visitors to the downtown area are reminded there will be no parking on Sarah Street, Seventh Street between Ann Street and Main Street, and on North Ninth Street between Main and Sarah.

Red Sox 'punch' Bombers from top of A.L. East, 3-2

BOSTON (UPI) — Mario Guerrero's two-out single in the ninth Wednesday delivered a fight-marred 3-2 victory for the Boston Red Sox over New York, knocking the Yankees out of first place in the American League East.

After two outs in the ninth, reserve catcher Bob Montgomery slapped a single to left and Rick Miller followed with a walk. Guerrero, a former Yankee, then hit a 2-2 pitch off Yankee reliever Sparky Lyle into centerfield which brought home Montgomery from second with the winning run.

The loss, coupled with Baltimore's win over Cleveland dropped the Yankees out of first place for the first time since June 20. They now trail the Orioles by four percentage points.

A dugout-emptying melee erupted in the ninth inning when Boston catcher Carlton Fisk pushed batter Gene Michael out of the way in order to chase down Thurman Munson, who was running home on an aborted suicide squeeze. Munson, who had doubled and moved to third on a ground out, bowled Fisk over but the Boston catcher held the ball for the out.

After an exchange of words, Munson punched Fisk, who countered with several blows. Players from both teams then began streaming out of the dugouts as the two were separated. But Michael then went after Fisk and several lesser fights broke out. Fisk and Munson were ejected from the game after the fight which halted play for four minutes.

New York took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Bobby Murcer's single that scored Roy White, who had reached base on a fielder's choice and then stole second.

Boston tied the game in the bottom of the first on singles by Tommy Harper and Doug Griffin and a run-scoring single by designated hitter Orlando Cepeda.

Boston took 2-1 lead in the second when Fisk was hit by a pitch and Miller doubled him home.

John Curtis (10-8) was the winner for Boston after going the full nine innings and Lyle suffered the loss, his seventh of the season in 11 decisions.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Wayne Twitchell chalked up his second straight shutout Wednesday night to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 2-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Twitchell, who is now 10-3 on the season, allowed two hits to chalk up his fourth straight victory and fourth shutout of the season. He struck out six and walked five.

Cardinals push margin with sweep

MONTREAL (UPI) — Reggie Cleveland shut out the Montreal Expos on five hits in the nightcap Wednesday night as the St. Louis Cardinals swept a doubleheader winning the second game, 2-0, after taking the opener 9-3.

In the first game, Rick Wise earned his 12th win of the season and helped his own cause with a three-run homer. Cleveland also won his 12th game of the year in 17 decisions as he walked only two and struck out five in his 20th start of the season.

Wise' home run in the first game came in the sixth inning to push the Cardinals into a 7-3 lead. The Cardinals had exploded for five runs in that inning. Wise, who has also lost six games this season, scattered nine hits. The Expos led in the game 3-2 after five innings after Jimmy Lyle's two-run double in the fourth and a run-scoring single by Ken Singleton in the fifth.

Jose Cruz' sacrifice fly in the sixth inning tied the score and Mike Tyson singled to score Bernie Carbo with what proved to be the winning run.

Strong pitching enables Mets to sweep Pirates

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Stone pitched an eight-hitter for 8 2-3 innings and John Milner hit two homers in the nightcap to lead the New York Mets to a 5-2 victory and a doubleheader sweep of Pittsburgh Wednesday night after Tom Seaver blanked the Pirates on four hits, 3-0, in the opener.

Stone, boosting his record to 7-3, allowed at least one baserunner in each of the first four innings. He settled down after that until the ninth when Harry Parker took over after Dal Maxvill's two-run double with two out.

Milner, whose two home runs gave him a Met season club record for left-handed batters with 18, hit a solo homer off loser Nelson Briles in the sixth inning and accounted for the Mets' fourth run with another solo shot off Dave Giusti in the eighth.

Ken Boswell also drove in a pair of runs for New York with singles in the fourth and eighth innings and Ron Hodges scored the other with a sacrifice fly.

Seaver was overpowering in the first game. He struck out 11 and beat the Pirates for the fourth straight time this season. Seaver, who regained the National League strikeout lead with 166, is now 13-5 on the season and holds a 16-4 lifetime mark over the Pirates.

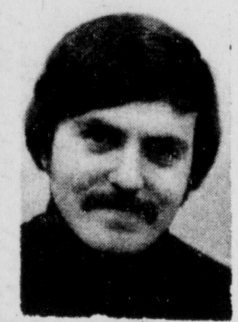

The Mets collected only three hits off three pitchers and oddly, none of them figured in the scoring. The Mets benefited solely from the wildness of starter Steve Blass to score all their runs in the first two innings.

Blass, who has been struggling all season, issued five walks, hit a batter and threw a wild pitch in 1 2-3 innings before being replaced by Bob Johnson.

Golfing experiences

Golf's a funny game, whether you're an Arnold Palmer or a Joe Blow who goes out now and then to hack around a bit. In fact, the hacking is even more fun.

Take last Saturday, for example. It was the day of our annual company picnic, so naturally we decided to set up a golf tournament to start the day off in fine fashion.

Speaking of fine fashion, one of the guys in my foursome, the first off the tee at Glen Brook, promptly smoked his drive onto the green, about 250 yards away. Since I'd figured I should win the thing, what with two of our tougher players not competing, I immediately got worried.

Then he parred number two, while I bogied the first two. Then the humor began.

For the rest of the afternoon, I helped guys in our foursome look for golf balls they hit into areas at Glen Brook I'd never been in before. Since I spend nearly all of my waking time over there, it was indeed a new experience for me.

Oh yeah. Remember the guy who drove number one? Well, he settled down to a group of sevens and sixes and even threw in a birdie on number 14, the par-five over the creek, before he literally staggered in. More than one of us was glad it was over.

Rumor has it that a local radio personality got ripped off recently in a golf related matter which resulted after he parred a hole to win a match.

Paul Flores, who used to hit the white pellet quite well (or so he says) while a member of the golf team at Easton High School, was told by a playing partner that he needed a par on 18 to break 90. "Of course," said the partner, "you won't get it." But he did. Remember the horse's head encounter in "The Godfather?" Well, the next morning Paul woke up with the head of his driver mounted on his bedpost. To top things off, the handle on his putter was unraveled. Only kidding, Paul.

Flores has been getting his game back into shape by playing quite a bit recently, mostly with me on Glen Brook's tough course. He was with me the day I broke the magic 80 barrier over there last week with a birdie on the last hole for a 79. Honest.

Flores himself played well that day. After getting over a case of "duffitis" on the first few holes, he settled down to at one point roll in six straight pars, paring two through seven on the front side, and turned in a fine score.

He was even heard to yell "Bring on Palmer and Nicklaus" as he left the clubhouse following the traditional round of drinks.

But he later explained he meant Vinnie Palmer and Horace Nicklaus, two buddies from back home that he went to kindergarten with.

Anyway, Paul's a funny guy I met over a pool table while we were both studying the game as students at East Stroudsburg State College. Last week we took in the sights at Fernwood, one of the newer 18-hole courses around, having just opened up the front nine and paired it with the older back nine.

Talking about having putting woes, Mr. Flores, as one of our teachers called him, three-putted the first six greens and seven of the first nine en route to a 42. Just think what he would have had had he made a few.

Talking of Fernwood, it's a great course for someone who can hit the ball long and straight. On the front nine, a long hitter can be hitting just wedges into the greens all day and maybe even drive one or two of the par-fours.

I was talking to Mark Monahan, the course ground superintendent, the other night over a game of eight ball and he explained the new nine has been open for just barely two months. If that is the case, that course will be lush before long.

The greens are nice on the front, but slick on the back, which makes you think quite a bit. The current course record is 74, but that won't last long. Wait until someone hits a few of those lush greens in the right spots. Bye-bye course record.

Anyway, we love to play golf and the people at Fernwood were just great to us. We'll be going back, weather permitting, for another shot at the course. Flores had an 89 and I beat him by 11 shots, so we'll be after it next time.

Here's a last funny definition: A cheater in golf is a guy who scores a hole-in-one on a hole and puts a zero down on the scorecard.

Squires get cash, forward Carter

ABA Squires swap Julius Erving to Nets

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — Julius Erving, one of the new superstars of professional basketball, "returned home" Wednesday when the New York Nets announced they had obtained his services in a complicated three-way deal involving the Virginia Squires and the Atlanta Hawks.

Nets President Roy Boe said that the acquisition of the 23-year-old forward "was entirely for cash." He wouldn't delve into a figure, but he did intimate that a reported sum of $3.5 million was too high.

Squires owner Earl Foreman told newsmen in Norfolk, Va., that his team will receive "in excess of $1 million" in the Erving deal.

"One of the main results of this trade is to hopefully have Julius remain in the ABA as opposed to other alternatives," Foreman said.

The Nets also announced that in a separate transaction they had sent 6-7 forward George Carter, their leading scorer last season, to Virginia for 6-8 Willie Sojourner, who averaged only 7.5 points last season in a reserve role.

Erving had been unhappy with the four-year, $500,000 contract he had at Virginia, and last year tried to jump to Atlanta of the National Basketball Association. When the courts ordered him back to Virginia, it was anticipated that he would join the Hawks when his Squires' contract expired in two years.

Further complicating the situation is the fact that Milwaukee actually owns the NBA rights to Erving, which it acquired by drafting him, and when Wednesday's signing with the Nets was announced, Bucks' President William H. Alverson said in Milwaukee: "It's the rottenest caper I've ever seen. I plan to raise as much hell with as many people as I can over this thing."

The Nets, in addition to satisfying Virginia, had to make a settlement with the Hawks to induce them to drop all their claims on Erving, who averaged 27.2 points in his rookie season in the American Basketball Association and 31.9 last year.

In Atlanta, Hawks' President John Wilcox said the Hawks will get back all the money they spent in their efforts to obtain Erving, a figure estimated by Wilcox at between $500,000 and $1 million. Among those expenses was a $20,000 annual salary Atlanta was paying Erving although he was playing for another team in another league.

"New York has always been my home," said Erving, who grew up in Roosevelt, Long Island, just 15 minutes away from the Nassau Coliseum, where the Nets play. "I'm very pleased and happy at the trade. It's a good move and a great opportunity for me."

Erving, resplendently dressed in a red, yellow and green colored plaid sports jacket, light yellow colored shirt, a big, black bowtie and red slacks, said he didn't feel he would be under additional pressure of being expected to turn the Nets into an immediate winner.

"The Nets definitely have the making of a championship ballclub, but I put a great deal of pressure on myself," he said. "I'm always wanting to be at the top and I give 100 per cent and more."

Boe, who touched off the news conference by saying, "Julius has come home," said that one of the factors that led to his acquisition was the desire of Squires' owner Earl Foreman "to keep Julius in the league." Asked what Virginia was getting out of the deal, Boe said he thought Foreman should speak for himself "but I understand that this will allow him to stay in Virginia."

As for the threat by Milwaukee, Boe said, "They have about as much right to Julius as the Nets have to Kareem Jabbar."

Erving, Atlanta Hawks reach contract settlement

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Hawks, who lost close to $1 million in expenses alone on basketball superstar Julius Erving without ever gaining his services, announced Wednesday they were getting all of their money back.

The new Hawks' president, John Wilcox, held a news conference and with obvious relief said the Hawks and Erving had agreed to rescind their 1972 contract.

Thus ended a long legal battle involving Erving, the Hawks, Erving's present team, the Virginia Squires, and the American and the National Basketball Associations.

Under the agreement reached in New York Tuesday night, Erving will play for the New York Nets of the American Basketball Association. The Squires will get in exchange a lesser-known forward, George Carter, plus other considerations.

The Hawks, said Wilcox, will get back all the money they spent in efforts to obtain Erving, estimated by Wilcox at between $500,000 and $1 million, plus the Nets' first round draft choice in the event the two associations hold a common draft.

In addition, the agreement includes "a number of options involving talent," Wilcox said, but he refused to elaborate.

The expenses the Hawks encountered in efforts to obtain Erving included lengthy court action and $20,000 annual salary they paid Erving while he played for the Squires.

The Hawks' five-year contract with Erving reportedly started at $200,000, going up to $260,000 in the final year. Wilcox refused to say what the Nets paid to pick up Erving's contract with the Hawks but he added that a published figure of $2.5 million "might not be completely accurate."

In the announcement Wednesday, Wilcox said the Hawks had withdrawn all claims to the 23-year-old 6-6 player.

"It is our information that the Hawks would not have the services of Erving for at least two seasons," Wilcox said, "and we want no further part in such an iffy situation."

"We feel we should direct all our efforts toward a more definite approach where the team and our fans are concerned," he said the agreement was "in the best interests of the fans and the team."

Rescinding the contract, Wilcox added, was not a matter of profit but of ridding the Hawks of an uncertain situation.

"We've got our heads out of the sand now and we know where we're going," he said.

The Hawks' failure to obtain Erving and the expenses involved are generally credited with contributing to the resignation of William Putnam as president of the club. Wilcox, in response to a question, said Putnam, whom he succeeded, was in charge when the Erving deal was made and "must bear the responsibility for it."

Although Erving attempted to jump from the ABA Squires to the NBA Hawks in his rookie season with the Squires, he did not play in regular season NBA competition. A federal court ruled that Erving could not play for any team other than the Squires until his suit seeking to break his contract with the Squires was settled. The court later ruled Erving had to complete his contract with the Virginia team.

The matter was further complicated by the fact that the Milwaukee Bucks owned the NBA draft rights to Erving. With the Nets-Squires-Hawks-Erving agreement, however, the squabble appeared to be settled.

PGA officials consider new tour

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI) — The PGA said Wednesday it was considering a plan to restructure the pro golf tour around a series of 15 "championship" tournaments — each offering at least $250,000 in prize money and "obliging" all the top name players to compete.

Joe Dey, commissioner of the PGA tournament players' division, said initial reaction from top players has been "generally favorable."

The plan could not get into effect before 1975, Dey said a full survey of players and tournament sponsors would be made before the next scheduled meeting of the tournament policy board in November.

If it were enacted, it would be the first time the PGA ever compelled its members to appear at any tournament.

"Sponsors have great difficulty with large tournaments without a guarantee of player participation," Dey said. "This would help to satisfy many sponsors."

Officials of the Houston Golf Association, who claim they lost about $50,000 on the Houston Open this year when Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Lee Trevino and Gary Player all skipped the $205,000 event, have been most vocal recently in criticism of non-appearing players. They said they would reduce their 1974 purse to $150,000 unless they could be guaranteed the big names would show up.

Dey said, however, the plan being considered by the tournament policy board — which includes players Charles Coody, Bob Rosburg, Deane Beaman and Lionel Herbert — was not an answer to the criticism from Houston. "Parts of this plan have been discussed and considered since 1969," Dey said. "There are a lot of little things which still have to be worked out."

Dey admitted that one of those little things was what action the PGA would take against any top player who didn't play in some of the 15 compulsory tournaments. The plan calls for compulsory appearances by the five most recent PGA, U.S. Open and Masters champions, the current British Open title holder, winners of all the preceding season's tournaments and leaders in the PGA's exemption points standings.

"We haven't talked about what the disciplinary aspects would be," Dey said.

He said money would not be the prime criteria for the championship tournament series, although he anticipated the tournaments would average $260,000 at the start. He said the events would be held "only on first class, well-conditioned, quality courses."

Apart from the 15 "championship" tournaments, Dey said the proposal for re-structuring the tour also included a series of 17 to 25 "major" tournaments similar to the present schedule but with a minimum of $100,000 per event. These tournaments would not require any players presence, although Dey said "the leading players would be expected to enter a number of them."

The proposal also includes a plan for a fifth major championship to complement the current four. It would be called the Tournament Players' Championship and would be staged in late summer.

The key point in the plan is, of course, the requirement that leading players would be required to compete "except for illness or grave personal emergency."

The Westchester classic, which begins here today, is the second most lucrative 72-hole tournament on the tour at present but despite its fat $250,000 purse, three of the top 10 money winners — Lee Trevino, Dave Hill and Billy Casper — are skipping it.

Orioles earn 4-2 win on Powell's home run

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Boog Powell slugged his ninth homer of the season Wednesday, a 410-foot blast to deep centerfield, to spark the Baltimore Orioles to a 4-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

With one out in the sixth inning, Powell unloaded his solo homer off Cleveland loser Dick Bosman to put the Orioles ahead 3-1.

Mike Cuellar went the first five innings for Baltimore to pick up the victory, raising his record to 8-11. Bob Reynolds came on in the sixth and retired the Indians over the last four innings without a run to pick up his fourth save.

How to keep cucumbers growing

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
CUCUMBERS AGAIN: If you want your cucumber vines to keep on producing, be sure to keep the vines well picked and they'll continue to produce for a longer period.

"Most cucumbers take 60 days or so to bear, so you can still plant a few more seeds for a later crop."

A good Japanese Hybrid is the Burpless variety, ideal for folks who find ordinary cukes indigestible. Fruits are long, slim and curved and about an inch in diameter. We grow ours in barrels and train them on a wire corset.

GREEN THUMB BONUS: If your going to make some pickles, or relish, then you'd better send for our 32-page booklet "Quick Pickling" . . . the natural, easy way to preserving. This guide is packed full of recipes for making such items as Dill pickles, Kosher dills, sour gherkins, Bread and Butter Pickles, 14-day Sweet Pickles, and dozens of others. Just send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope for your copy.

COMMON TREE PROBLEMS: Along our highways we see a lot of bad signs -- leaves turning brown on our trees, and dying.

A common disease is leaf scorch (or sun scorch) and you see it on maples as well as other ornamentals. Symptoms include leaf tips, margins and areas between the veins turn brown. Branches may die back. On conifers, the needles are short, yellow tipped.

Control: Water the trees as much as possible. Quite often you see an entire branch wilted and scorched. This is probably verticillium and the best thing is to cut the branch out flush.

Salt injury along highways cause leaves to be stunted, scorched at margins; tips also scorched. Such trees color up early in autumn, defoliate and may die back.

Control: Drench salt-splashed areas liberally with clean water to wash out salt. Feed to stimulate growth.

GREEN THUMB CLINIC: A reader writes: "Please tell us what makes holes in our lawns. We never see anything causing them."

ANSWER: We get this question often, and list the following reasons for holes: Skunks, starlings, grackles, flickers, certain types of wasps, squirrels, chipmunks and night crawler.

If you go out at night with a flashlight especially after a rain, you'll see the night crawlers all over the place. They slide back into the ground when you shine a light on them. They're harmless.

Skunks dig holes, searching for grubs and worms. Birds do the same.

"How-to" books range from giving advice on how to build your own harpsichord to how to make a million dollars on Wall Street. (Authors of the last type make their million from selling books to the gullible, not from buying and selling stocks.)

Inevitably, there are books on how to be an effective teacher. Sometimes the advice is lost in a bitter tirade against the entire education system, and the teacher must conclude that his best course is to do the opposite of what is presented in the book.

But there are other books that are full of sweet wisdom on what not to do in the classroom. In this type of book, the author may give an example of the wrong way to handle a problem and then give his version of the right way.

For example, a teacher may get nasty with a student who refuses to take his seat. The student in turn gets sassy with the teacher and winds up in the principal's office. However, the author's lesson continues, if the teacher had been sweet and reasonable, like the teacher in the author's example, the student would have taken his seat immediately!

The message is: It's easy! See? But I have a message for this author: Like you, sir, I can make any student do whatever I want him to do — on my typewriter!!!

The Senate hearings on the Watergate scandal are giving the American people a crash course in government that is usually reserved for graduate students in political science. After all, who else would be interested in the theoretical question of what would happen if the President of the United States decided not to obey court decisions, including those of the Supreme Court?

Furthermore, who but students and their professors would want to examine the Constitution under a magnifying glass and dig deeply into court records to find the means of dealing with this situation — just in case?

Well, in this topsy-turvy year of 1973 all Americans are attending school, because far-out theory has become stark fact. The professors are now holding class for the ditch-digger, the doctor, the statesman and the politician.

According to The New York Times, there was a 63 per cent increase in the number of children being treated in mental health facilities in the period between 1966 and 1971.

Among the different reasons given for this increase by various psychiatrists that pertain to education were "that American society rewards aggression . . . History is taught in our schools . . . with the emphasis on, in eras delineated by, wars."

Also, there "is the average child with a flat I.Q. of 100 who is suffering because he is in a classroom where the average may be as high as 120. It depresses him, makes him anxious and hostile."

I guess teachers ought to be polite and reasonable after all in asking students to sit down!

Scout recycling praised

By GAIL NEVINS
STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg borough manager Don Gage announced recently that the borough endorses the continuing efforts of Boy Scout Troop 81 in its monthly collection of newspapers for recycling.

Gage urges all residents of the borough to contact troop leader Richard Parton (421-3938) to be added to the pickup schedule (since the regular waste hauler no longer recycles papers separated for that purpose). The troop picks up dry bundled papers left at the curb the first Saturday of each month. In case of rain, it is the second Saturday.

During June the boys collected 12 tons and 14 tons in July. They have been raising funds in this manner for more than two years.

Gage noted that the borough also continues its endorsement of the newspaper recycling program of the Monroe County Environmental Action Group which collects papers at the deposit site in the borough shed on Day Street.

"The important thing," he emphasized, "is to keep the papers out of the landfill and lessen our total waste load. Towards that end, we urge all residents to separate their old papers and either have the Scout troop pick them up or leave them at the shed."

The price is right for any organization so inclined. A half-hour color film on a huge waste reclamation program undertaken in the Federal Republic of Germany is available on free loan from Association-Sterling Films, 866 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.

The films, "The City: A Study in Survival," is significant for the new approach it takes on pollution control, land reclamation and water purification, but it also ranges farther to include a vast effort to salvage an area that had been almost devastated by industry over a period of 100 years.

It is interesting to note that the Environment Action Bulletin states that the film should be especially interesting to people at local and state levels of government.

Those who grouched and grumbled a couple of years back when congress scuttled the use of the supersonic transport (SST) in this country would do well to take note of recent occurrences in the British Isles.

A Concorde SST provoked 340 damage claims resulting from its sonic boom during an 800-mile test hop down Britains west coast. According to the British Aerospace Ministry, damages paid ranged from $50,000 to a farmer for the death of minks he was raising to 68 cents for a Scotsman's loosened ceiling tile.

Everything isn't all bleak department: According to Maurice Strong, executive director of United Nations environmental programs, in the year since the U.N. Conference on the Human Environment, at least 85 countries have taken concrete action in environmental programs.

While in Bonn, West Germany, recently he told the press, "The interaction between national and international efforts on the environment will, I hope, give the U.N. a new lease on life."

Phase IV complication—freeze drying up beef supplies

Dow Jones - Ottaway News
NEW YORK — "I got angry. Then I got frightened. Then I bought extra meat."
So a shopper in suburban Hastings-On-Hudson, N.Y., reacted this weekend to a cascading series of events that was shriveling up supplies of meat available for sale in U.S. retail stores.
The chain reads something like this:
Under President Nixon's Phase 4 restraints, the price of beef remains frozen until Sept. 12. But many packers contend they can't process the meat at going prices without taking a loss, so some are temporarily closing their doors.

With less beef being processed, some supermarkets are unable to stock their meat coolers as they normally would. Some post signs of apology. So shoppers, fearing worse shortages, grab up what is available, further aggravating the tight supplies.
But while some consumers are buying more, some packers are processing less.

Flavorland Industries Inc., formerly Needham Packing Co., suspended beef slaughtering in Sioux City, Iowa, last Tuesday and stopped similar activities at Omaha, Neb., and West Fargo, N.D., on Friday afternoon. James R. McDonald, president and chairman, blamed the government's price controls, and said the company wouldn't be able to resume production until the government allows the industry to pass on added costs.

The Pacific Coast Meat Jobbers Association, a group of more than 80 northern California beef wholesalers, jobbers and packers, contended the government freeze on beef was "arbitrary and capricious" and will result in "gross inequities, hardships, serious market disruptions and domestic shortages of raw materials."
In a request for an injunction against the beef price freeze, the jobbers argued they were unable to obtain beef at prices that would permit them to process and sell it within the ceilings without taking a "substantial loss."

The court is expected to hear arguments this week for a preliminary injunction against the government move.
Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, in an AP interview, contended in Washington, however, that "there isn't any shortage of beef." He said "the animals are out there. They're going to be coming in."

But he allowed that "some spotty black markets" were beginning to appear in the meat industry, in small slaughtering operations near the point of production that bypass normal distribution channels.
And he also conceded to the AP that "the word has gotten out about possible beef shortages" and this has "induced a lot of housewives to buy ahead so that they won't get caught short."

For some shoppers, though, it may already be too late to stock up on beef to last until the price freeze on beef runs out in another six weeks.
By early Saturday afternoon, one large supermarket in Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., a New York City suburb, had only about one-third of its normal meat supply, and there wasn't any lamb or chicken in sight.

Borman's Inc. asserted in Detroit: "there's a very real possibility we won't have any beef" this week.
First National Stores, a Boston area chain, "could be dry by next weekend," its chief meat merchandiser said. Cuts likely to be hardest to get, he said, will be chuck roasts, rounds and rumps, but ground beef should be in good supply.

Indochina war cost just begun

By WARREN L. NELSON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although the Indochina War is sputtering to a halt after eight years and $110 billion, the hidden and greater part of the full costs of the war have only just begun.
Those who anticipate war funds will now be available for social welfare uses should note the debt interest and veterans pensions stemming from the Civil War came to more than four times the actual cost of the fighting.
In fact, the books on the Civil War are not closed yet. Although the last veteran, a 117-year-old Confederate, died in 1959, 545 widows and children of both Confederate and Union soldiers are still receiving pensions from the Veterans Administration.
The cost of these pensions is now a paltry sum compared to that for veterans of recent wars, amounting to $618,000 last year, according to the VA.

Books not closed
The last veteran of the Vietnam War, however, will undoubtedly still be alive in the 2050s and the last dependent might survive into the 22nd Century if, as in the past, some aged veterans take teen-age brides.
The books on the American Revolution were not closed until the last dependent, Phoebe M. Palmeter of Brookfield, N.Y., died at the age of 90 in 1911—130 years after Lord Cornwallis surrendered his Redcoats to George Washington at Yorktown, Va. The total cost of that war came to $255 million of which 60 per cent was interest on the debt and pensions for veterans.

Of the $14.4 billion total cost of the Civil War (not including sums spent on those ubiquitous monuments) 78 per cent was debt interest and veterans benefits.
The veterans really got organized after the Spanish-American War. The total cost was $5.9 billion of which only 5 per cent was for the fighting and 1.4 per cent for debt interest, since that 13-week war came cheap and was quickly paid off. But veterans' benefits took up the remainder, or almost 20 times more than the military costs of the war.
Some 2,000 veterans and 31,000 widows and children of Spanish-American War veterans still draw VA checks at a cost of $35.8 million last year.
The books on the more recent wars are still wide open, of course. To date, World War II veterans' benefits and debt interest have cost about $160 billion—less so far than the $315 billion spent to fight the war but considerably more than the $110 billion military cost of the Vietnam War.

Altogether the VA mails pension and compensation checks each month to 5 million persons, or one in every 40 Americans.
While the Indochina War fades into American history, the Veterans Administration thrives with $12.2 billion budgeted for the fiscal year that began July 1—half for pension payments, one-quarter for medical care and the remaining quarter for college payments and other educational costs of veterans.

Scientists pursue acupuncture puzzle with photos

Dow Jones—Hawley News

NEW YORK — Zakir Hussein, who plays a small Indian hand drum called a tabla, recently had his fingertips photographed before a concert at California State College at Sonoma. The picture revealed heavy red blotches surrounding the tips — not on the fingers themselves, but in the air around the tips, rather like a halo. After the concert the experiment was repeated and the photo showed red, white and blue streamers flowing from the fingertips.

At the University of California at Los Angeles, experimenters photographed the fingertips of a medical student before, during and after his consumption of 17 ounces of bourbon. The glow from his fingertips increased noticeably during the test.

In Seattle, at the Experimental College of the University of Washington, researchers are planning to check the validity of a traditional acupuncture point on the human body by giving a volunteer a six-pack of beer to drink. The imbibers' foot will be photographed before and after he drinks the beer, to see if there is a change in the pictures. One acupunctured point on the sole is supposed to bear a relationship to the bladder under stress — thus, the foot could start emitting signals from this point when the bladder is full.

Some researchers believe that the signals that show up in such photographs are strongest at the traditional acupuncture sites. If so, this would be a step forward for Western medical specialists seeking to unravel the mysteries of Eastern medicine.

These unusual photographic experiments, and many more like them, are the outgrowth of a process introduced in the U.S. two years ago. The resulting pictures are remarkable in that they capture on film previously invisible emanations from the Russians, led by the discoverer of the picture-taking method — Semyon D. Kirlian and his late wife, Valeria, have been quietly investigating the subject for 30 years.

Many potential uses

U.S. scientists already are excited about the possibilities for wide application of the technique. Thelma Moss, assistant professor of medical psychology at UCLA, hails the procedure as "a laboratory tool, perhaps the equivalent of the EEG (the electroencephalograph, a device used to detect and record normal and abnormal brain waves) in its early stages of development." Moss was one of the first Americans to go to Russia (in 1970) to study the Kirlian technique and bring it home.

Moss believes it may be possible to measure states of anxiety through Kirlian photography, which would be a major diagnostic advance in the treatment of emotional disorders. Blotchy, red discharges from fingertips usually reveal an anxiety state, she says. Her experiments show, she reports, that people who are relaxed or drunk are a favorite site for research because of the ease of photographing them. They usually generate a larger glow.

William A. Tiller, professor of materials science at Stanford University, believes that Kirlian photography may make it possible to "monitor energy states" in living things. While he cautions that scientists are still in the early stages of understanding the process, he believes "it will turn out to be a most efficacious device with great value in biology, medicine and agriculture."

The U.S. picture-taking process, patterned after the Russians', is simple and relatively cheap. Called Kirlian photography, after its inventor, it works something like an X-ray machine.

A generator is rigged to emit an electromagnetic field to a metal plate. A piece of photographic paper or negative film (which can be developed later) is placed on top of the plate. The object to be studied, such as a fingertip, is placed on the paper or film. A photograph is taken in a dark room, or in a small dark box enclosing the device, merely by turning on the generator for a moment. This gives an electrical charge to the area surrounding the object. Such a device, which requires no camera, can be built for about $50 dollars.

The results are startling even to scientist. Waves or force fields can be seen surrounding leaves freshly plucked from plants. The emanations become distorted if the leaf is mutilated. They gradually diminish and disappear as the leaves die.

Faith healers, persons who claim they can cure illnesses by touching others, have a greater emanations after the "healing," some researchers say. This gives rise to speculation that some flows from the hands of healers into other people.

Precisely what phenomenon is being photographed is the subject of a growing debate among scientists. Some suggest it may be the "aura," or life force, allegedly visible to some mystics but not to the unaided eye of ordinary observers. The aura would be analogous to the halos painted centuries ago around religious figures.

Tiller of Stanford says the radiations are a "corona discharge." This is a kind of static electricity sometimes emitted after a person walks across a carpet and touches another person or metal lamp.

Richard Miller, physicist and director of research of the Department of Paraphysics and Paraphysics at the Experimental College of the University of Washington in Seattle, says he believes the phenomenon is related to the normal discharge of gases from living objects. "The human skin is permeable and emits gas as do all living things," he says. "Kirlian photography ionizes this gas and enables you to photograph it. What's significant is that the gas appears to be concentrated at the sites described in acupuncture.

Valuable medical tool

Some scientists assert recent experiments indicate Kirlian photography may develop into a valuable medical tool, even though it isn't thoroughly understood, much like the recent introduction of acupuncture to the Western world.

Tiller says the Russians discovered that the finger of a human dead for several days didn't emit any distinctive patterns, which parallels U.S.

studies with dead plant leaves. "The self-emission of living things seems to be a direct measure of the life process occurring within their system," he writes.

The structure and emission characteristics of these discharge channels," he continues "can be utilized for an objective evaluation of the physiological state of the living organism, for diagnosis of body health of pathology, and for registration of the emotional state."

Research planned in the U.S. may prove of significant value. One study, for example, is aimed at unraveling the learning process in children. Dr. Gerald G. Jampolsky, staff psychiatrist at the Child Center, a nonprofit institution in Kentfield, California, says he is having a Kirlian device built for him. He says he plans to take Kirlian photographs of the fingertips of children while they're allegedly reading to see if he can discover when a child is, instead, daydreaming. "We hope to find patterns and differences," he says.

James Hickman and Larry Amos, researchers at Sonoma State College in California, are planning an experiment at a nearby state mental hospital to develop Kirlian photography into a diagnostic aid. They say they intend to study Kirlian photographs of fingertips of "normal" persons and compare them with patients at the institute. Hickman says that preliminary studies indicate it will be possible to tell whether a person has an emotional disturbance of some kind. "We hope to pin it down through patterns in the photographs to determine specifically what the disorder is," he says.

Miller in Seattle plans to examine his gas-emission theory further, linking it with acupuncture. He says he hopes to use his discoveries for diagnosis as well as the basis for potential healing.

Capitol opinion

By JOHN BARRETTE

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Shapp Administration has exercised its right to fire a man who insisted on exercising his free speech rights despite intense pressure.

Alexander J. Jaffurs, ousted deputy attorney general for the state Liquor Control Board, became the John Dean III of Pennsylvania state politics.

Jaffurs is believable since he refused to go along with the gag rule he says the administration imposed on him or to sanction questionable LCB operations.

Dean, whose credibility in the Watergate scandal has been attacked by the Nixon Administration, obviously had a vested interest in the outcome of that investigation.

Jaffurs had an interest in the outcome of investigations involving the liquor industry, but that interest was no more than required of any public servant.

Released from the so-called gag rule by his dismissal, Jaffurs told newsmen of several instances in which he refused to bow to political pressures concerning probes of influential people.

Jaffurs, according to a memo from LCB members to state Attorney General Israel Packel, was fired for three specific reasons which Jaffurs labeled "specious."

Ludicrous might be a better term. The real reason for Jaffurs' dismissal stems from the aborted investigation of the so-called gift liquor scandal.

Jaffurs last December in a memo to the Justice Department which was released to the news media charged state officials — including two LCB officials he named — accepted liquor from wholesalers.

Jaffurs called for a full-scale investigation by the department, state police or the state crime commission. After Packel replaced former Attorney General J. Shane Creamer, however, the probe died.

Under Pennsylvania law, it is illegal for distillers to give liquor to public officials. The distilleries can be prosecuted and the officials dismissed under administrative rules.

Instead, the man who embarrassed politicians of both parties was fired because he didn't believe in special favors for the influential and kept breaking the gag rule to get action.

The latest charge from Jaffurs concerned a "whitewash" by the LCB of a probe into a beer distributorship owned by state Rep. Lester K. Fryer, D-Berks.

Jaffurs said the board refused to follow up on a charge that beer was sold to a minor. Jaffurs said that "triggered" his firing.

Indeed, that was one of the three reasons cited in the LCB memo to Packel. But it was just one instance when Jaffurs refused to cooperate by remaining silent.

The real reason for Jaffurs' dismissal is that he posed a threat to politicians and officials who want to protect the liquor industry rather than consumers.

This is shown by the question nobody in the Shapp Administration wants to answer.

G. Gordon Liddy: The witness who simply isn't there

By ED DOOLEY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — G. Gordon Liddy and several police officers equipped with binoculars and walkie-talkies were hidden in bushes at the estate of LSD advocate Dr. Timothy Leary.

A young woman suddenly stepped nude from one of the tents on the grounds and "they became so preoccupied with this girl that they gave their hide-out away and blew the whole bit."

That slapstick account from Liddy's past in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., during the Leary raids of the mid-1960s is only one of the bizarre episodes in the life of the Watergate mystery man who refuses to talk.

At 42, Liddy is a man of many careers: Korean War veteran; lawyer; FBI agent; assistant District Attorney; unsuccessful politician; Treasury Department official; White House operative probing security leaks; Nixon re-election committee expert on the campaign spending laws.

From news stories and testimony at the Senate Watergate hearings, the emerging picture of Liddy is that of an eccentric whose anti-Communist passion is matched only by his fierce loyalty.

The committee was told, for example, that Liddy once offered himself as a target for assassination if his superiors in the Nixon re-election campaign were not satisfied he could keep quiet about his role in bugging the Democrats.

In another account, Liddy reportedly jumped to the conclusion he was ordered to kill a prominent person on the White House "enemies" list when a superior at the Nixon campaign committee mumbled something about "getting rid" of him.

"Where I come from that's a rubout," Liddy reportedly said when told no order had been given and the phrase was only a figure of speech.

The question of who directed the brash and flamboyant Liddy to undertake the Watergate bugging—or if he was acting on his own—may never be known. He refuses to tell federal authorities or congressional committees anything about his activities.

Liddy managed to escape arrest at the Watergate when five of his colleagues were nabbed. And his zeal to destroy evidence pertaining to his clandestine work has made for humorous testimony at the Senate hearings.

Robert Mardian, a former assistant attorney general, recalls how Liddy told him of using a paper shredder to destroy—simultaneously—serialized $100 bills and soap wrappers.

Liddy, a gun collector, also saved soap from various hotels. Fearing that, and the traceable money, might reveal his campaign activities, he carefully unwrapped each bar, shredded the wrappers and saved the soap.

Mardian said he just considered Liddy "some kind of a nut," but Nixon's deputy campaign manager, Jeb Stuart Magruder, testified that Liddy once threatened to kill him.

During a difference of opinion, Magruder recalled "I simply put my hand on Mr. Liddy's shoulder and he asked me to remove it and indicated that if I did not serious consequences would occur...he indicated he would kill me."

Magruder said he dismissed the matter as "simply Mr. Liddy's mannerism" and did not consider it an actual threat.

Another of Liddy's campaign colleagues, Robert Reiser, told how Liddy did some "fairly bizarre things" including giving an office secretary "a large poster of himself probably six-feet by four feet in size, a picture of himself with a bull horn..."

While others are telling the long story of Liddy's exploits, the thin man with shiny dark eyes and thick black mustache prefers absolute silence.

He refused to give Senate Watergate investigators even his name and a House committee will decide this week whether to seek a contempt citation for his refusal to even be sworn in at a hearing about Central Intelligence Agency involvement in Watergate.

If indicated and convicted, Liddy could acquire another jail sentence—up to one year and a $1,000 fine. Liddy already is serving an eight month contempt-of-court sentence on top of a maximum 20-year sentence for his part in Watergate.

The story of how Liddy rose from pistol-toting assistant district attorney in Poughkeepsie to counsel of the Finance Committee to Re-Elect the President is slowly becoming clearer.

Liddy was born in New York City, and his father, Sylvester, 72, is a senior partner in a Manhattan law firm. Both men are graduates of Fordham University and Fordham Law School.

Liddy served in an Army artillery unit in Korea and as an FBI agent in Indiana, Denver and Washington. He left the FBI in 1962 and was credited with the arrest at gunpoint in Denver of Ernest Tait, one of only two men to make the 10-most-wanted list twice.

Liddy practiced law with his father in New York and then became assistant district attorney for Dutchess County, crusading against drugs and taking part in at least one raid on the Leary commune.

Tough and self-assured, he was said to have a passionate belief in the dangers of drugs, criminals and Communists. His court room antics are legend.

Liddy was once reprimanded by a judge for firing a pistol loaded with a blank in the court room during a case he was prosecuting. On another occasion he smashed a wooden plank that was evidence in an assault case over the jury railing.

He ran for the U.S. House in 1968 on a law and order theme—"Gordon Liddy doesn't bail them out—he puts them in"—but withdrew before the election. He drew attention to his platform by wearing a pistol during campaign appearances.

Liddy ran on the Conservative ticket but threw his support to Republican Rep. Hamilton Fish, who in April, 1969, recommended Liddy as special assistant to Eugene T. Rossides, then assistant Treasury secretary.

But Liddy's unauthorized letters to congressmen and a hard-line speech against gun controls led to his dismissal in 1971, and he ended up at the White House under John D. Ehrlichman.

The rest is well known: His involvement in the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist as part of the White House "Plumbers" unit;

his shift to the Nixon campaign committee; his trial for the bungled burglary at the Watergate—all these made national headlines.

He has been portrayed at the Senate hearings as the author of the bugging plans and even more bizarre activities, but Attorney General John N. Mitchell says he never authorized Liddy's proposals.

Since his incarceration, Liddy has exercised religiously and limited his diet because he said the starchiness of the food was making him fat.

He looks thinner these days, almost gaunt.

Meanwhile, G. Gordon Liddy

resides at the District of Columbia jail, where he keeps his secrets about the Watergate scandal behind a wall of absolute silence.

Hospital rights

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pennsylvania has a citizens bill of hospital rights, believed to be the first of its type formulated by a government agency. The 12-point bill duplicates and in some cases elaborates on other previously issued patients' rights statements, including one approved by the American Hospital Association.

Herbert S. Denenberg, the state's insurance commissioner, said the bill of rights is directed at the public, not just patients.

DERBY LINE, Vt. (UPI) — Smuggling is nothing new along the Vermont-Canadian border.
During the French and Indian Wars it involved trade. Later, slaves were smuggled into Canada via the "underground railroad."

Smugglers Notch on Mt.
Mansfield, according to folks in that area, got its name from the whiskey runners during prohibition. Even now, Vermont is an important conduit for heroin entering the United States.

But there's a new smuggling trade on the rise in this New England state.

It deals with aliens.
For $300 to $600 a person, Chinese and other aliens from various parts of the world are escorted to the border, and sometimes beyond, by smugglers, according to E.W.
Wildblood, associate deputy regional commissioner for operations of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Wildblood says there has been a dramatic increase not only in the number of illegal crossings, but in the multitude of nationality groups involved.

"Previously those apprehended were Canadians—90 per cent," he said. "This year 26 per cent of those we stopped were non-Canadians."

In 1968, the Border Patrol caught 94 aliens in the Northeast Region covering New England, New York and New Jersey. Last year, Wildblood says, 440 were caught, including people from Haiti and the British West Indies, Italy and Greece.

But the most significant increase has been among the Chinese. In 1968, Wildblood said, only 11 Chinese persons were apprehended for entering the U.S. across the Vermont border. Last year the figure was 109. Despite the increase in apprehensions, the Chinese are probably the most successful.

Chinese men sign on freight-ers in Hong Kong bound for Montreal, where they jump ship with their life savings and perhaps additional financing from relatives, he said.

"Montreal has a Chinese community," said Wildblood, and the aliens make their way to it. After a contact is made.
And the smuggler has his money, the alien is taken to the border.

The Derby Line area of Vermont across from Quebec is one of the most popular places for crossings because of its many small, unguarded dirt roads. Wildblood said such roads are often randomly checked.

Some smugglers arrange for transportation to New York City where the alien can blend in with the Chinese community.
But many drop their customers at the border, where they can walk across. The contact then drives through Customs, doubling back to pick up his customers and put them on a bus in Burlington. The operation may take less than four hours.

Often, said Wildblood, "it's the old con. The smuggler collects his money, takes him to the border and says 'you'll meet your contact over there.'
When he crosses there is no contact, and often he'll walk right into the arms of a border guard."

Sometimes it's worse.
Last winter, Wildblood said, two Chinese aliens were found in a wooded patch of land in Vermont, frozen to death. They apparently were waiting for a contact that never arrived, or one which never existed.

Even those with handicaps

Volunteers vital to hospital job

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The volunteer long has been a vital part of a hospital's operation. Now a new type of volunteer is welcomed to the scene—the one with a handicap.

"These people often are the ones who recall their own hospital stays and remember other volunteers fondly," said Mrs. Sylvia Pasmantier, who heads the volunteer service at one major hospital making a place for the handicapped to offer a service.

"It is as though they were trying to repay," she said. "Some come a great distance to work one, two or three days a week. In many cases they ask for duty on the floor where they once were patients."

Mrs. Pasmantier is on the staff of Downstate Medical Center, part of the State University of New York complex.

"None are discouraged. Most volunteers already are motivated. . . that's why they're here," she said in an interview. "But the handicapped seem to have an extra motivation. . . can contribute an extra warmth."

"They have almost a religious fervor. . . and give a lot of their own strength."

Helping the handicapped to help others is a program adaptable to many other hospitals, Mrs. Pasmantier feels.

Downstate Medical, in Brooklyn, is a 350-bed hospital being expanded to double its patient capacity. Mrs. Pasmantier said its regular volunteer total year-round numbers around 100; in summer it doubles with high school and college students.

The numbers with some frailty still are small, but nothing seems to discourage them.

Mrs. Pasmantier described some of these volunteers.

Has third pacemaker

There is Mrs. Armata Livingston, widowed since 1958, never ill until 1969 when she had a serious heart attack.

Now living with a pacemaker to help her heart operate normally, she comes into Downstate at least once a week to visit cardiac patients and to encourage those who're getting pacemakers. Mrs. Livingston has been given her third.

"Now that I can't work, this is the least I can do," Mrs. Livingston said.

Mrs. Pasmantier said Mrs. Poyser comes in two days a week doing clerical chores at one of the nurses' stations. But she also helps with patients — "I served them lunch and I provide escort service when they need it."

"It's very gratifying," said Mrs. Poyser. " . . . the big payoff comes in how you feel about yourself."

Author charges 'vulgarity'

Weddings just garish affairs?

By DUSTON HARVEY
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Weddings in this country have "more to do with materialism, romanticism and ritual in American life than with marriage."

They produce scenes of outlandish vulgarity, conspicuous consumption and dehumanizing greed, fuel a $7 billion a year industry replete with kickbacks, and show a stubborn resistance to the swirls of social change, says the author of a new book on the subject.

For instance: A Beverly Hills tobacco czar spent $150,000 on flowers to convert his estate into a southern plantation for his daughter's wedding by gluing millions of magnolia blossoms to elm trees.

Mashed potatoes at a Los Angeles wedding dinner and the family poodle were both dyed pink to match the bridesmaids' dresses.

A Pasadena bride's mother had a church painted yellow to match the color scheme for the ceremony, then repainted green the next day.

A Houston bride attended 30 pre-nuptial parties, received $30,000 in gifts from 750 invited guests, her mother organized a card catalog system to keep track of the offerings, hired police to guard them and conducted tours for the neighbors.

Caterers, band leaders, clothiers, florists and photographers in the wedding business agreed costs could be reduced 20 per cent if kickbacks were eliminated.

Despite the media's attention to the so-called "New Wedding," 80 per cent of first marriages are formal, seven of eight take place in church or synagogue, 96 per cent have a reception, and 84.5 per cent of brides wear formal gowns, most chosen to make her look "like a fairy princess."

The views on American weddings came from Marcia Seligson, an unmarried "rabid feminist" from Los Angeles whose peek behind the bridal veil was published as "The Eternal Bliss Machine: America's Way of Wedding."

"I think vulgarity is funny, not important," she said in a recent interview. "Pink poodles and potatoes and dancing horses and chopped liver shaped into cruise ships are funny."

"But what does offend me is dehumanization — when it becomes really clear that the wedding has nothing to do with the relationship between two people, but has to do with things ... with the worst excesses of the American dream come true. That really frightens me."

The most surprising thing — "only to people on the coasts; no one in Middle America is surprised" — was that weddings haven't changed at all in the past century despite well-published nuptials in bizarre places, with self-written vows and untraditional garb.

"The fact is that we Americans are getting married almost precisely as we did a hundred years ago" — the same long, white gowns, the same vows, champagne and cake, rice and honeymoons.

"One of the things I learned about was ritual in our lives — the importance of repeated observances as one of the fortresses against internal rum-blings in society," she said.

She also found most Americans spend too much on weddings because they "want to do it right" and are so insecure they let caterers, banquet managers and wedding consultants take over and run up the bills. Both the working and middle classes spend more on average for their daughters' nuptials than the "upper crust," Ms. Seligson contended.

She didn't want to prophesy, but predicted women's lib would have long-term effects on both weddings and marriage. "Traditional monogamous marriage is not here to stay," she suggested.

"I certainly would not like to see weddings done away with, but they should be more about the people involved, about real values, and not an excuse for outlandish proofs of status and displays of vulgarity," she said, admitting that some of the ceremonies she attended brought tears to her eyes.

But Miss Seligson, a reporter and former book publicist, didn't think her descriptions of wedding foibles would have the desired effect.

"What I really think it will do is push people to even greater heights of vulgarity," she predicted. "They'll use it as a guidebook — and every poodle in the United States will be dyed pink and purple."

Air pollution doesn't hurt just people; earth suffers

By DAVID A. MILNE
HARRISBURG (UPI) — It's gonna getcha.

Maybe it will give you lung cancer, or cause a run in your panty hose. It may cause a bridge to collapse, an airplane crash or cut down on the size of your home grown tomatoes.

But slowly, insidiously, air pollution is going to hurt you, whether you live in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia or Punxsutawney.

Scientists know that air pollution effects human health, but they have recently come up with startling evidence that it may be just as deadly to trees, crops, metals, paints and fabrics.

Fred H. Haynie, a scientist at the National Environmental Research Center near Durham, N. C. said, for example, that it may have been the real cause behind airplane crashes and a famous bridge disaster.

Haynie said research has shown that sulfur dioxide — a pollutant — can cut short the life of metals such as steel and aluminum that are under heavy stress.

The Silver Bridge collapse that killed more than 40 persons in Point Pleasant W. Va. and several airplane crashes may have been caused by metals — weakened by pollution — giving way, he said.

Experiments have involved exposing materials to amounts of sulfur dioxide, nitrogen dioxide and ozone at levels similar to those found in the air, he said.

So far, it has been shown that fabrics fade and weaken, white side wall tires crack, and paint, building stones, concrete, marble, galvanized steel and aluminum under stress deteriorate, he said.

A chain link fence made of galvanized steel would begin to rust in three to five years in an urban environment like Pittsburgh's while the same fence would last 20 to 30 years in a rural area, Haynie said.

And during periods of high sulfur dioxide pollution and high humidity, women will find runs mysteriously appearing in their panty hose because of a chemical reaction caused by the environment.

He said the Environmental Protection Agency has estimated that the cost of replacing materials destroyed or damaged by air pollution each year is $4.5 billion.

At a time of threatened food shortages, research by another scientist at the U. S. Agriculture Department's Agriculture Research Service at the University of North Carolina could be very significant.

Dr. Walter W. Heck, said experiments and studies are showing air pollution has a definite effect on the productivity of many fruits, vegetables and trees.

Pollution can also cut down on the production of cotton and alfalfa and effect the growth of white pines, scotch pines, sycamores and hemlocks.

Considering the damages it can cause to health, clothes, houses, crops, trees and other materials so important to our society, if air pollution were caused by an unfriendly foreign power, it might go by another name, chemical warfare.

White House view

Agnew reads up on presidency

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Backstairs at the White House: Vice President Spiro T. Agnew is reading up on the presidency, according to his aides.

They were unable to supply the names of books Agnew is known to be delving into — just in case.

The Vice President described his role as "supportive" when he visited President Nixon at Bethesda Naval Hospital last Tuesday, five days after Nixon was stricken with viral pneumonia.

When reporters asked Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler whether any duties had been turned over to Agnew during Nixon's recuperative period, Ziegler replied: "There are no ceremonial duties for him to fill."

However, the following day the White House announced that Agnew would preside at a Cabinet meeting where Nixon's Phase IV economic control plan was to be explained to members.

Agnew displayed that he still has a big hangup about the press when he was interviewed by reporters outside the hospital. In a half-jocular but noticeably defensive manner, he told reporters that the "press did not consider the vice presidency an important job."

Reporters found that the same old Ziegler was back in the saddle during the President's illness.

It was Ziegler's job to keep reporters at bay about whether Nixon's tape-recorded conversations with Watergate witnesses would be turned over to the Senate investigators.

But Ziegler hunkered down, as the late Lyndon B. Johnson used to say about such situations, "like a jackrabbit in a storm."

As one reporter put, Ziegler's response was a "thundering burst of silence."

And another of the President's own aides characterized the Press Secretary's performance as "just another no comment briefing."

Even though Nixon's senior advisers, John B. Connally and Melvin R. Laird, told the President he should "clean house" there are still remnants around the President of the clique brought in by former top aides H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman.

Stunned as he is by the revelations of his former trusted lieutenants, Nixon still is reluctant to move against some of the remaining staffers brought in by Haldeman and Ehrlichman.

The President's palace guard used to boast of having "the boss in our hip pocket."

Insiders say that Nixon has been shocked by the amount of power delegated or usurped by his staffers at the White House. He feels betrayed by some of his closest associates.

The President's daughter Julie Eisenhower has said that the President is going to start running things himself.

Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell referred to activities of some Nixon aides as "White House horrors" in his testimony before the Senate Watergate investigating committee. From the revelations of buggings, burglaries and forgeries planned in the President's house, many might feel the reputation of the Executive Mansion is stained. But not the American people as a whole.

The long lines of tourists which form outside the White House every day for a chance to walk through the mansion attest to a wide feeling it is still the nation's pride.

For many the White House is not the same now that the Nixons have removed the magnificent Abraham Lincoln portrait from above the mantle in the State Dining Room where it had hung for the past decade or so.

The Lincoln portrait has been placed in a corner panel in the East Room.

Curator Clement Conger explained that President and Mrs. Nixon prefer to have a landscape painting in the State Dining room.

California program helps divorcees to adjust to life

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — More than 200 divorce actions are filed in Fresno County each month with dozens more wives and husbands agonizing over such a move.

Yet most of the couples involved, especially those with children, are ill prepared for the emotional, financial and social consequences that follow. In an effort to minimize the crisis caused by the splitting of a family and to advise those considering divorce, a group of professionals from the fields of law, psychology and other areas recently organized the Community Divorce Adjustment Program. The idea was spawned last year when Dr. Romulos Gonzales, a child psychiatrist at Valley Children's Hospital, himself underwent a painful divorce and became concerned about others in a similar situation, particularly the children.

He contacted Superior Court Judge Kenneth Andreen of the family court to see what could be done.

Andreen in turn contacted Percy Bernstein of the Family Service Center and before long representatives of the legal community, Fresno County agencies, Fresno State University, the Lutheran Social Service Center and other church organizations, Parents without Partners and other groups all joined in the project.

The first public meeting of the group was held in mid-July. Program sponsors expected a turnout of perhaps 15-30 persons; nearly 200 showed up, most of them women. Some were in the midst of divorce proceedings, some recently divorced and some considering it.

Divorce attorney John Fitch spent half an hour discussing current divorce law in California, types of separations; custody, visitation rights, child support, alimony, and the costs of a divorce. Dr. Ralph Victor, a psychiatrist, talked of the depression participants in a divorce usually undergo and the associated feelings of guilt, rejection, unworthiness and loneliness, not only for the parents but also the children.

The program organizers dispensed pamphlets containing telephone numbers and addresses where divorced persons or those contemplating divorce can seek information about financial problems, emotional problems, problems with children, legal help and social activities for the divorced.

Following the talks the speakers answered questions.

Dan Farris of the Fresno County Mental Health Department said weekly talk groups would be organized and moderated by a professional person to allow people to discuss their specific problems, although he noted the sessions "would not be therapy groups."

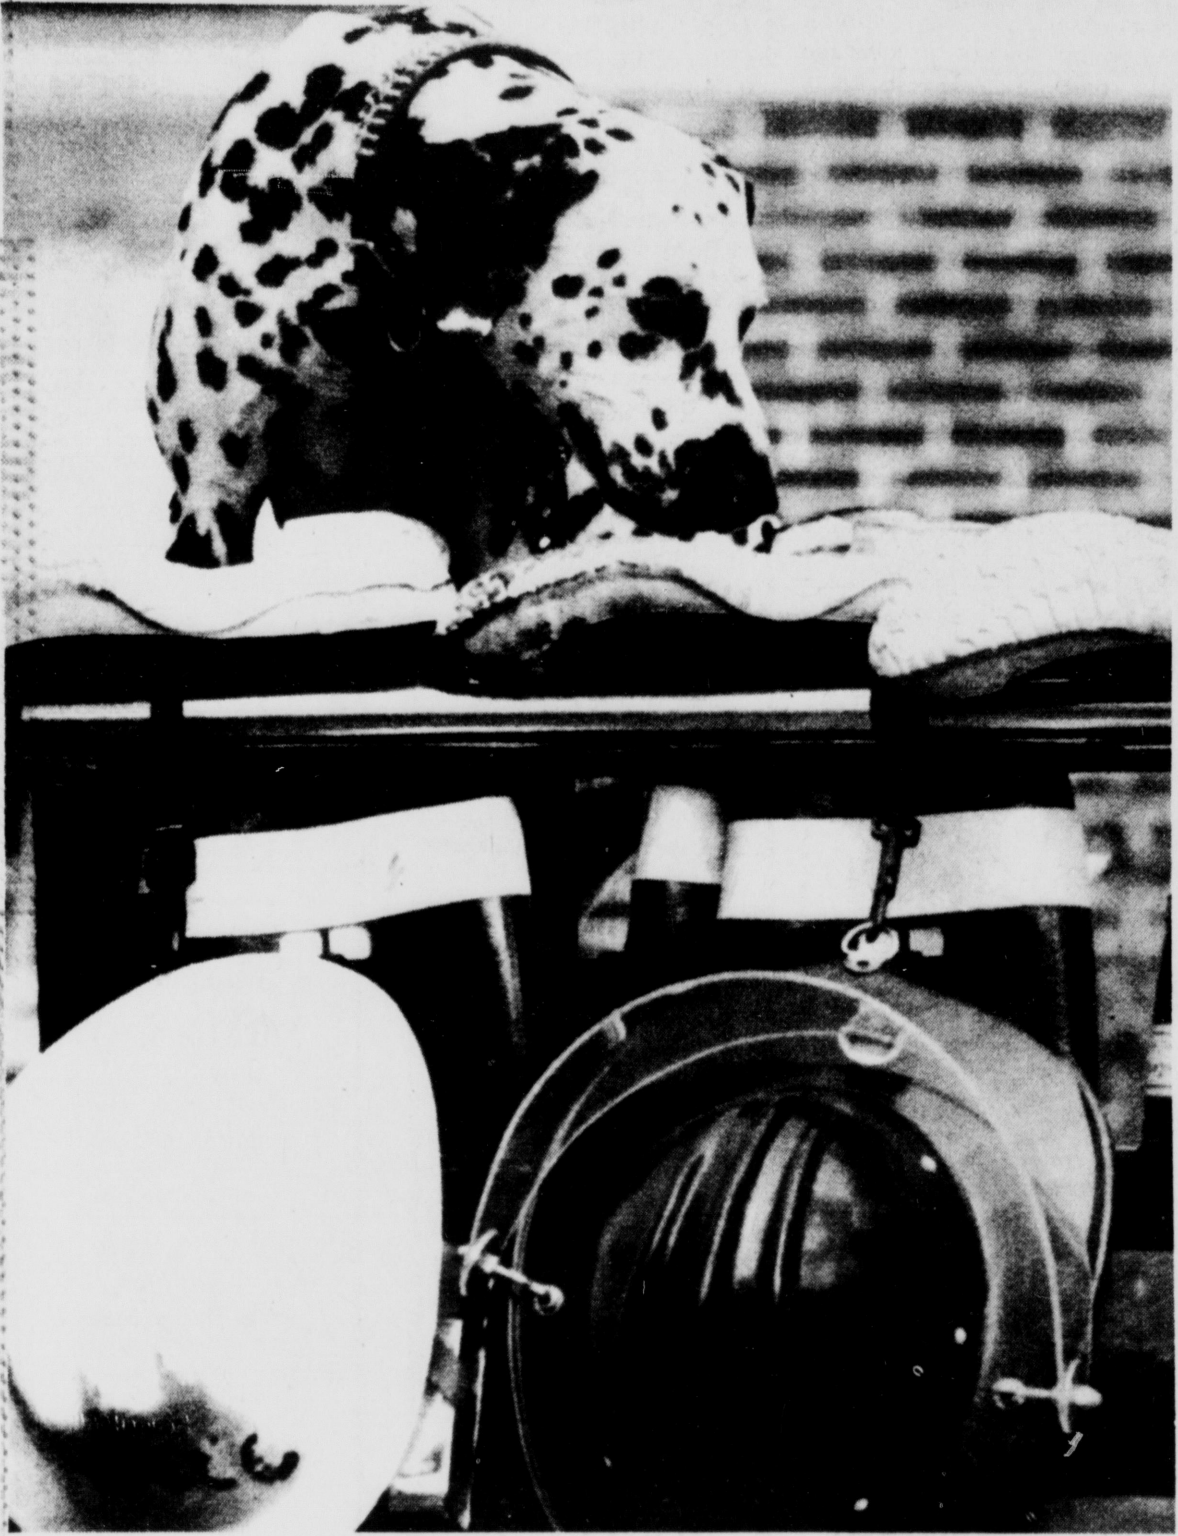

Organizers hope to hold the weekly "rap" sessions for a while and eventually establish a monthly meeting to be held in different parts of the city.

Fitch says a main purpose of the program is to dispel the false romors which often surround the process of divorce and to allow persons contemplating such an action to get accurate information before they make a decision which will affect the rest of their lives.

Fitch said it is hoped that those contemplating a divorce become well acquainted with the consequences beforehand, and if they still decide to go ahead, the break will then be less painful and bitter, with less resulting psychological damage both to themselves and their children.

An additional benefit will come, he said, when those attending the talk sessions have a chance to share experiences and insights, and realize they are not alone in the crisis of divorce and can still recover and lead productive, rewarding lives.

What could be more tempting to a Dalmatian than a fireman's boot? This dog, Chief, decides to nose around and find out while riding a Walker Township fire truck in Fireman's Parade in State College.

(UPI Telephoto)

HONOLULU (UPI) —While pain is universal, the response to it is not always ouch.

A University of Hawaii professor of public health has learned that the typical American patient's reaction to pain "follows the same pattern of inhibitions as that of a primitive tribesman."

But Dr. Roy G. Smith said the tribesman's inhibitions stem from necessity, while the American's are for reasons of pride and a desire to help medical personnel.

In a report based on the work of anthropologists and his own observations of pre-industrialized Pacific cultures, Smith said in Western Samoa, "adults may undergo tattooing, tooth drilling and bone setting without overt reactions indicating pain."

"This lack of reaction is born of necessity. There are so many instances of pain in the lives of pre-industrialized society members that survival depends upon self-control."

Concern over image

Smith cited New Guinea natives and the Maori people of New Zealand as other cases of traditional cultures equating masculinity with lack of overt response to physical pain.

Pride prevents 'ouch!'

He emphasized that in these cultures, pain denial is linked with environmental necessity.

Because of the constancy of threats from without, Smith said, to dwell on pain is a luxury these people cannot afford.

In modern American hospitals, male and female patients try to react in a similar stoical manner, Smith reported, although there is no necessity for it. He attributed the American suppression of pain to concern over image, the importance of social approval and the idea of not wanting to be a nuisance to those in attendance.

East European Jews, Italians and South Americans, both in industrialized and rural areas, respond freely to pain, Smith said. "It is acceptable to talk about pain, complain, moan, groan and cry."

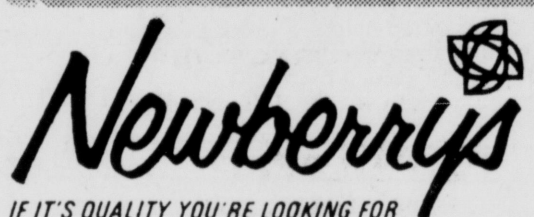

A patient who responds with a lot of moaning, and a patient who is overly quiet are both often "punished" by not getting the care they need, Smith said. The over-complaining patient is likely not to be taken seriously, he said, and the quiet patient may be ignored.

IF WE WENT BACK TO HERE,
NOBODY WOULD WORRY ABOUT ELECTRICITY...

... Mainly because electricity wasn't even invented. But we all have to be realistic. We're not there, we're here. We all have to face today's problems, including those that affect Met-Ed and other electric utilities.

Even if America were to take the most drastic step and freeze technology, more and more electricity would still be needed. Take a look at all the new homes going up in your area. They all need electricity. Take a look at the new industries and businesses moving into your area with new jobs. They need electricity. Take a look at some of your community's most pressing pollution problems. Most of their solutions will require electricity.

And, worst of all, freezing technology would prevent man from discovering vital solutions to a lot of today's problems that cannot be solved with old ideas. Research and development is the key to a better world.

Met-Ed is working hard to find solutions to the problems it faces. And don't let anyone kid you into thinking that it shouldn't take time and cost money. At the same time Met-Ed is searching for ways to serve you in the future, it is providing you with electricity 24 hours a day. It's not getting any easier, but the people at Met-Ed are willing to accept the challenge because it's their future too.

So, remember, when people start talking about how great the past was, remind them that we've got to make sure the future will be just as great.

Bottom falls out of bottomless business

DOW JONES-Offaway News HOLLYWOOD — It is evening on the Sunset Strip, a jaded pastiche of carnal delights, and business is proceeding as usual — almost.

At the local hard-core pornographic theaters, various numbers of naked people are doing various things to each other up on the big screen. The local massage parlors, featuring scantily clad masseuses who practice "physical therapy," are thriving.

But at the Strip's legendary nude bars, everybody is getting dressed.

While everything else carries on blithely on this hedonistic stretch of tarnished tinseltown, nude bars are being forced to cover up due to recent decisions by the California and U. S. Supreme Courts. And the customers are responding by staying away in droves. In short, the bottom has fallen out of the bottomless business.

At the Body Shop, the Hot Box Revue '73, advertised as the "nudest, sexiest show in town," has drawn five patrons who huddle together near the stage like Eskimos around a fire, watching girls with pasties the size of pancakes cavort through several burlesque-like comedy and dance skits. "I can last maybe two more months at this rate," says owner Al Dietch, who has fancied up his show with expensive costumes and a $5,000 silver lame curtain in the seemingly vain hope of luring back the crowds of yore.

At the Phone Booth, owner Walt Robson can count the crowd on one hand of "Three-

Finger" Mordecai Brown, the old baseball pitcher. The hardy few watch a lone dancer whose most noticeable features are long, sinewy legs and thick, long false eyelashes that look like they came from the Fuller Brush Man. "We used to do 200 lunches a day here," Robson recalls wistful-ly. "It was our biggest time.
That's down 90 per cent now, although things are starting to pick up a little. But some of the bigger clubs are going to have to close down."

"People can see more at the beach," Robson says. "Why should they pay me?"

The causes of all the fears and tears by bottomless-club owners and their clientele are a pair of court decisions that upheld the rights of both the state alcoholic beverage control board and local municipalities to regulate the display of nudity in establishments that serve alcohol. Bulwarking those decisions is the recent U. S.
Supreme Court ruling returning authority to establish standards of obscenity to states and local communities.

San Francisco 10 years ago and made dancers like San Francisco's Carol Doda almost household words. But after a while, a sated public clamored for more. About three years ago, the bars introduced bottomless, and when court decisions went in favor of the bars on the ground that nudity per se wasn't obscene, it appeared that nakedness was here to stay.

Now buoyed by the recent decisions, many municipalities are preparing ordinances like Los Angeles County's, which requires coverage top and bottom (interpreted, according to deputy county counsel Michael Dougherty, as "a brief bikini bottom with a minimum amount of coverage and pasties of a reasonable size").

San Francisco has recently passed an ordinance banning bottomless, which follows closely the less strict alcoholic beverage control standards, which also ban topless waitresses.

Aids adolescent avoirdupois

Summer camps for chubbies?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Does your waistline bulge just a little too much to suit the latest halter top styles? Or are your friends starting to talk about that baby fat of yours that didn't go away?

Women with weight problems have turned to countless diets, exercises and fads in what has become a prominent part of the culture, but if you're a teen-age girl, those extra pounds can mean added trauma to the sometimes traumatic period of growing up.

For a small minority of adolescent chubbies, the path to a new figure may start during the summer at private camps especially designed to trim away pounds.

There are several such slim down camps tucked away in different parts of the state, each holding six to eight week sessions during the summer months.

The approach and design of all the camps differ only slightly. The aim is to keep the girls who range in age from 10 to 22 busy with the usual round of camp-type activities; swimming, hiking, biking, games, outings, horseback riding.

At the same time, the camps throw in special exercises and classes in grooming and diet.

As far as meals go, there is no special type of diet, as long as it is well-balanced and doesn't go over about 1,200 calories a day.

sensible eating habits which will carry over when the girl returns to the real world of highly accessible refrigerators and after school snack shops.

home armed with menu planning tips and recipes to use to keep their weight down.

The key is "just eating the right things," says Mrs. The-ma Hurwitz of Camp Napanoch. She says the girls learn to call her "Aunt Thelma."

"It's a matter of knowing what a four ounce portion of meat looks like so the girls will know how much they are eating," Mrs. Hurwitz explained.

"Aunt Thelma" directs the camp along with a number of young counselors who also have weight problems because as she explains, "they can sympathize and relate."

Just so the lessons of the summer do not fade, the camps keep in touch with their former fannies through periodic mailings during the year.

The camps claim the average weight loss is between 27 and 31 pounds and about 90 per cent keep the weight off.

"We weigh every Monday morning before school," writes Mrs. Dave Conger whose daughter, Karen, attended Camp Murrieta last summer.

At the end of the slimming summer, the girls are treated to a clothes-buying spree where they can adorn their new figures with those preciously smaller dress sizes.

The cost of the slimming camps ranges from a little over $1,000 to about $3,000 for each girl—too high a price for most families.

Cambodian rebels have strangle hold on Phnom Penh

By KATE WEBB
PHNOM PENH (UPI) — There is no digging of trenches around Phnom Penh, no extra sandbagging of buildings.

To be sure, foreigners are leaving, commercial flights out of the country are booked up a week in advance and embassy evacuation plan details are being refined everyday.

But in the streets of the Cambodian capital there is sluggish, near indifference to the bombing and fighting on the outskirts—the concussions from the shells rocking the city day and night.

When about 30 shells smashed into the southern section of Phnom Penh in broad daylight last Wednesday, there was no rallying to the flag, no reaction as there was in 1970 when students rushed to the frontlines to help the hard-pressed army.

U.S. and Cambodian air support was intensified on Wednesday. F4 Phantoms and OV-10 spotter planes dove in and dived over the suspected insurgent launching sites—less than five miles south of the city near a glass factory.

As darkness fell, the gunships that circle the capital until dawn dropping flares and hammering suspected insurgent positions with rapid machine gun fire went on double alert.

In Phnom Penh itself, the government shuffled its feet and its papers and announced new curfew measures—and new office hours. Civil service commandos went through their paces in the parks before breakfast.

A former field officer, now back in the city reserves, commented blithely to a group of diplomats: "If they wanted to, they (the insurgents) could come through here like tea through a strainer."

The coming Aug. 15 U.S. bombing halt has taken much of the stalemate feeling away from the war. That date will mark a milestone, not so much because of the past effect of the bombing but the implications for morale and the government's position politically in the near future.

American air experts agree that the bombing has not been a major factor in stopping the Communist offensive. It has, they say, "made holes in and slowed the insurgent troops but not stopped them in their steady advances." They agree, however, that it has been a major factor in the morale of government soldiers who although trained to expect it, still have never received the necessary training to know how to make the best use of it.

The instances of government troops being hit by their own artillery or air strikes mount, simply because the opposing sides are so close. The pilots report the ground troops needing strikes within 200 and 300 yards of their positions daily but add that the soldiers don't really know how to follow up the air strikes.

The day after Wednesday's attack, the city's government newspaper carried reports that U.S. Ambassador Emory C. Swank and the top military men in his embassy had called on President Lon Nol. Sources said the meeting was in effect to tell the ruling High Political Council that it just wasn't good enough to sit and watch. Other sources, although less reliable, put it more bluntly, saying the ailing Lon Nol was told simply: "Shape up or ship out."

The refugees, as in the past, have taken the brunt of the battle. Their flimsy palm leaf and wood houses were ravaged by Wednesday's shelling. The dilemma now is where to go.

The insurgents in burning their villages had told them in effect to get out, go to Phnom Penh. The government had no security to offer them.

A few tried to cross military lines and go back to their rice fields despite the bombing. A few others tried to find places deeper in the overcrowded city. But most stayed where they were.

What puzzles diplomats and political observers in Phnom Penh is not the poor performance of the Phnom Penh army, already exhausted by the Communists' April offensive or the political lack of cohesiveness in Phnom Penh. What they want to know is, what are the intentions of the insurgents?

Despite the bitter fighting to the north, south and east, the main supply routes—the Mekong River, Highway 5 to the west and Highway 4 to the deepwater port of Kompong Som—all remain open, giving Phnom Penh time to stock up on much needed supplies of rice, fuel and ammunition.

One diplomat said: "They now seem to be just chewing away at Fank (the government army), causing as many casualties as they can, demoralization among the army and eating away at any confidence people have in them. Chopping at the isolated province capitals and outposts to prevent reinforcements coming in, but not taking anything of strategic importance."

The number of armed insurgents is estimated to be about 50,000 frontline, hardened combat troops, some 200,000 village reserves and token support from the population.

The fact that diplomats are concentrating on speculation on the insurgents' designs is indicative in itself. But it has not yielded tangible results. Reliable intelligence on the insurgents is poor to nonexistent.

What the people do know is that the insurgents have been holding several high-level meetings, one of them early this month which was publicized. It spoke not of battle plans but of future policy—a policy of neutralism and postwar reconstruction. It was a confident message, not asking for uprisings but speaking as if the battle were already won.

Earlier, it was thought they planned to continue a slow strangulation plan, much publicized by deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk in Peking, simply driving Phnom Penh to its knees by cutting supply routes and profiting from the time gained to indoctrinate, train and organize.

Now the alternatives seem to be reduced to two: attack and complete military victory at the cost of some damage to the army, or obtain the strongest negotiating position possible.

Diplomats this week were still dubious about cohesion on the other side.

Names in the central committee of the Cambodian Communist party (Pracheachon), which was solidified in a mass party meeting in the fall of last year, are little known and shadowy. As far as diplomats here can tell, the dominant figures are still pro-Hanoi but the more numerous neutralists are simply anti-Phnom Penh elements.

It appears to be lack of knowledge of the organization that has led to diplomats saying on one day they believe there will be attack on the city and the next that there won't be.

"Even if they have it together enough to hit the city and try to take it," said one foreign businessman who has lived in Cambodia for the past eight years, "there are going to be many troubles for them later. There are still the questions of which factions will dominate, and what concessions are to go to the Vietnamese, and what role Sihanouk will play, if any."

"The bombing halt is in a way too early for the insurgents," he said. "They have done a lot of organizing, but not as much as they would like. It wouldn't be like what the Communist planned for (1968) Tet in Saigon...with cells already waiting in the city ready...in government and in the army, but more the beginning of a new struggle—minus American military power."

KOMPONG THOM, Cambodia (UPI) — The way to get to a cut-off province capital in Cambodia is by supply plane, jammed among rice sacks, munitions boxes and oil drums.

The descent to Kompong Thom, one of seven provincial capitals surrounded by guerrillas, is a tight corkscrew from 5,000 feet to avoid a low approach over enemy-held territory.

From the air, you see a bright orange-roofed pagoda, the flash of a winding river, a small town, no airport and the apparent foundations of hundreds of new buildings.

There is no airport, not even an airstrip, and the foundations are all that's left of what were once the suburbs of Kompong Thom, 78 miles due north of the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh.

The supply plane touches down on a two-lane road—Highway 6, which used to take motorists and foreign tourists from Phnom Penh to the archeological ruins of Angkor Wat.

The plane is three hours late this time as it bumps off to where the sidewalk ought to be, under a clump of trees marked for parking. On the other side of the road, grass is growing over the wreckage of two planes that didn't make it.

A group of solemn-faced high school students planning to take the plane out wait in the shade for the supplies to be unloaded, holding identical plaid canvas overnight bags.

The students leave, the plane corkscrews up and drones off. The road is a road again. Kompong Thom's four vehicles—the only four—trundle over a rebuilt bridge, a second cement bridge and into the strangely silent town.

The province officials talk with pride of how Kompong Thom—its outer suburbs now completely flattened by the fighting—has hung on through three years of attacks, cut off from the south, and more often than not from supplies and reinforcements.

Under the trees along the river bank can be seen the twisted metal cages of what used to be the capital's zoo.

"We ate them all," an official said. "The monkeys, the crocodile, the snakes."

North Vietnamese troops attacked the city on June 4, 1970, and life has been tough ever since. Kompong Thom asked neighboring regions for help, but the other areas had their own fighting to deal with.

Kompong Thom dug in and the face of the war changed slowly. U.S. and Cambodian air support and artillery arrived.

Trained soldiers with M16s finally arrived and replaced university students with their old Russian, French and Czech rifles.

But the other side changed too. More Cambodians were trained and fighting, fewer Vietnamese were seen. Refugees seeking shelter in the besieged town became fewer and fewer as the Communist organization improved. Kompong Thom's wealthy took the empty supply planes to Phnom Penh or war-free Battambang in the west.

With the help of heavy bombing, the city held through 1971 and 1972. The fighting slowed down after a big attack last April. Since then, the population of 20,000 has spread out two to three miles from the city.

For the first time in three years, the city center has electricity, although it's only for a few hours each night. The lights shine out of rocket holes like Halloween lanterns.

Sweat shirt literature helps some people get things off their chest. Gripes against our social system, for instance. Or our economic system, where the gripes concentrate on profits.

The young man in our picture forgets that he bought the shirt with the money some worker earned for his labor. And labor is a major beneficiary of that sale—since employees get 2/3 of the corporate income dollar.

The manufacturer of the shirt could not survive without a profit, nor could the retailer who sold it. No matter how you feel about profit—without it, neither labor or management, nor retailer or wholesaler could survive.

The very price of the shirt is established by the profit system. If one merchant takes too great a profit his price may be high. This in turn will encourage a competitor to take less profit at a lower price in order to get a bigger share of the shirt business.

In a word, profit is an incentive to beat the competition with new and better products at more attractive prices—all of which results in more and better jobs.

Profit is a built-in part of the American economic system which has given us by far the highest standard of living in the world.

So let's not lose our shirt—or our head.

Communist bloc crop failure looks like more imports

Dow Jones - Ottaway News
MUNICH, West Germany — Crop conditions in the Communist bloc are taking a turn for the worse, presaging a tighter supply and the possibility of added import requirements.

Weather data, news reports and guarded statements by government officials are being analyzed by specialists of Radio Free Europe, Radio Liberty and other groups that specialize in following developments in Communist nations.

The information forms a picture of growing unease in such lands, of drought in some areas and unfavorable harvesting weather in others — factors that are dampening earlier expectations of fairly good crops — and the Communist bloc has almost no leeway to allow for any paring of crop expectations.

"Any losses at all could add to import requirements," says Rockingham Gill, a Soviet analyst affiliated with Radio Free Europe. He estimates that even with normal weather conditions, the Soviet Union is likely to be importing six million tons of grain annually over the next three to five years. And he estimates this year's Soviet grain crop at 186 million tons gross yield, up from last year's 167 million tons, but below an earlier prediction of 190 million tons made by agricultural experts at Radio Liberty.

"The discrepancy may seem small," says one source, "but another four million tons is a substantial figure should this amount be added to import requirements."

There are differing estimates of Soviet crops. Radio Free Europe (RFE) asserts that it doesn't pay attention to barn yield estimates, which measure uncleaned grain that contains some chaff. RFE tries to estimate actual grain content.

Soviet sources downcast

Radio Moscow confirms that unfavorable weather is delaying the grain harvest in some major producing regions. It said the most severely affected areas were the Kuban, Volga, Altai and Krasnoyarsk region. The station also said weather caused harvest delays in the southern part of Russia and in "several parts" of the Ukraine. In the Ukraine, Moscow Radio stated, all available harvesting machines had been ordered to go on a 20-hour-a-day schedule. Newspaper reports from the Soviet Azerbaijan region told of "serious shortcomings" in harvest work there. The reports said harvesting machinery was being used inefficiently and warned local party officials they would be held responsible for rectifying the situation.

front-page article saying a lag in the construction of grain silos and a shortage of spare parts are hampering this summer's harvest. It said: "Any failure to keep the planned date for completion of construction work should be viewed as a serious violation of state discipline."

Drought in eastern Europe

In another article, the trade union newspaper, Trud, reported that many trucks, combines, tractors and other harvesting machines are idle because of parts shortages.

Meanwhile, East Germany is suffering from a drought. Sunny skies and hot weather bring long faces in East Berlin, where agricultural authorities are worrying about possibly lower yields. One report of the East German News Agency said winter and summer crops in the central and northern parts of the country were most affected. The report said people in the stricken agricultural areas "are making a great effort to make up for the consequences of the drought." But it didn't say how this could be done.

Moreover, reports from eastern and central Europe indicate that Poland and Czechoslovakia may be experiencing the same dry weather. Poland takes from 0.1 million tons of imports in a good year such as 1970 up to 2.1 million tons in a bad year such as 1972. Czechoslovak imports have ranged from 1.2 million tons in 1965 to 1.5 million tons in 1967.

Not all the new is bad; bumper harvests are expected in the Soviet Union's vast central Asia region, for example. But grain trade sources say Soviet grain buyers have been making soundings in Australia, Argentina, Canada and elsewhere regarding grain purchases. These may be nothing special, but in the past the Soviets have been shrewd in placing a few orders in different places so as not to upset the world market.

Book, film industries chaotic

By EARL C. GOTTSCHALK
Dow Jones-Ottaway News
NEW YORK—The Supreme Court's ruling against pornography is already having an impact — but not exactly the impact that was expected.

The decision last month gave states and communities broad power to move against pornography, and indeed some so-called hard-core pornography has already gone back underground in some communities. But the ruling has also brought confusion and chaos to the more traditional branches of the publishing and filmmaking industries.

"The decision wasn't supposed to be aimed at the serious filmmaker," says Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, a trade group. "But already the Georgia Supreme Court has declared obscene 'Carnal Knowledge,' a serious film made by director Mike Nichols. Apparently the courts aren't able to distinguish between commerce in ideas and commercial exploitation of sex."

Production plans for some movies have been canceled in fear of the new ruling, and copies of "Playboy," "Oui" and "Penthouse" magazines have been seized by authorities in Macon, Ga., and several other small towns in the South. And many executives in the movie and publishing industries see a resurgence of local censorship boards. "It's a call to arms for every crazy vigilante group in this country," says Robert Bernstein, president of Random House, a major book publisher owned by CBS.

The book and magazine publishers and the movie companies have formed an ad hoc coalition to seek to mitigate the impact of the decision on their industries. The coalition plans to petition the court to clarify its decision, to propose model obscenity legislation for states and localities and to amass legal defense funds for expected court fights by booksellers and filmmakers.

Amendment jeopardized

"The First Amendment is in jeopardy," says Ken McCormick, chairman of the coalition and a senior consultant at Doubleday & Co. "We hope to avoid a deluge of state legislation that will be regretted later." Many others outside the industry, it should be noted, have hailed the Court ruling and see it as quite consistent with the First Amendment.

Of the major film companies, United Artists, a subsidiary of Transamerica Corp., possibly has the most to lose. Its controversial X-rated hit, "Last Tango in Paris," starring Marlon Brando and Maria Schneider and directed by Bernardo Bertolucci, has already grossed $32.1 million from showings in 92 U.S. cities and 17 countries. United Artists plans to release the movie for wider distribution next month.

Paramount Pictures, a subsidiary of Gulf & Western Inc., recently faced a minor dispute in Dallas when the local film board made the company print "not suitable for young adults," on the advertisements for "Paper Moon," a film starring Ryan O'Neal and his 10-year-old daughter, Tatum.

they are confused by the decision. "The guidelines aren't that clear," says Joseph Alterman, executive director of the National Association of Theater Owners, which represents 9,000 U.S. theaters. "Exhibitors are taking a hard look at every movie they play."

Cops after 'girlies'

The large-circulation men's magazines, like "Playboy," "Oui" and "Penthouse," have already faced new censorship problems. Issues of all three publications have been seized by police in several small towns, including Macon, Ga., Carrollton and Gulfport, Miss., Hopewell, Va., Prattville, Ala., and Ashland, Ohio.

The major book-publishing houses report no censorship problems so far, but they fear the return of local censorship groups. "The law has the potential for a great deal of haphazard local mischief," the ad hoc coalition of movie, magazine and book companies declared.

Town Hall tonight

NEW YORK (UPI) — Town Hall, the midtown auditorium which was the scene of radio's long-run "Town Hall of the Air" series, has had a revival of activity in the 1972-1973 season with a full schedule of vocal and instrumental recitals, theater, chamber music, jazz, and film series.

Bernstein, the Random House president, says the decision will cost the publishing industry "millions of dollars" and "hours and hours of effort." Monitoring the 50 state legislatures to see what obscenity laws will be passed "will run into six-figures with fees to attorneys in capital cities alone," Bernstein says.

Post of naval aide eliminated

By HELEN THOMAS
WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon has decided naval aides are expendable, and he is eliminating the White House post.

Two previous naval aides ran into troubled waters and were summarily removed. Cmdr. Charles E. Larsen, the first to go, wound up on submarine duty off San Diego. The last to leave was Cmdr. Craig Campbell, whose departure was announced last March.

Circumstances surrounding Campbell's termination have been kept secret, but the word around the White House is that it was sudden and unexpected.

First Lady Pat Nixon has not danced with the President in the White House since their daughter Tricia wed Edward Finch Cox in June, 1971. Observers believe if she had her way, they would linger longer at their own parties.

But the President is a stickler for protocol and after seeing a state visitor to the door, he leads his wife quickly to the elevator for the family quarters, leaving the other guests to dance and have a good time. And they do.

Mrs. Nixon grinned and grasped the picture quickly last Tuesday when she was being pulled away from the party by the President after they said their farewells to the Shah of Iran and Empress Farah. "Stodgy," she called out to reporters, referring to herself and the President.

Incidentally, the two most glamorous women at the dinner were the Empress, who wore a stunning yellow silk gown, and jet-setter Christina Ford in a show-stopping strapless white sequined gown designed by Christian Dior. She also wore a large part of her fabulous jewel collection.

The honor of sitting next to Mrs. Ford went to Henry A.

The Orwellian ironies in the White House have come full circle.

Kissinger, who submitted names of his National Security staffers and newsmen to be wiretapped by the FBI, says he was unaware he was being bugged by President Nixon every time they had a top secret conversation—and they had many.

Who knows, it may lead to more candid memoirs by Kissinger, Nixon and others who are likely to be writing in the future. The White House insists they have not been edited.

The White House has never officially announced that the recording system has indeed been halted. Presidential spokesmen, however, have confirmed the stories they leaked that the recording devices in Presidential offices and on his telephones have been deactivated.

Ironically, even for history's sake, they refused to say when the President gave the order to stop the taping.

The sense that Big Brother was watching you was always prevalent in the LBJ White House. Reporters used to quip that President Lyndon B. Johnson was getting an instant feedback on their personal conversations.

Kissinger seems to be able to quip about the electronic eavesdropping at the highest levels in the White House. "My father wants the tapes," he joshes.

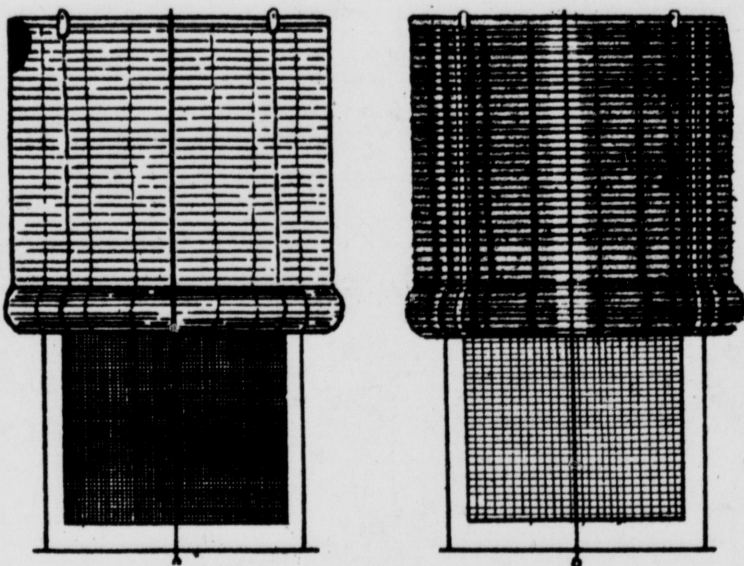

Kissinger's proud father, Louis Kissinger, keeps a scrapbook on his celebrity son's accomplishments and exploits. Kissinger's parents live in Brooklyn and keep tabs on their son through the newspapers, although he tries to see them often.
